IN THE MOOSE RUN VALLEY

A Delightful Sunday Passed with the McKinley Family

FEAST IN THE WOODS

James McKinley of Moose Run Gathers Together his Friends and Celebrates his 76 Birthday.

WAS A SOLDIES IN THE CIVIL WAR

Having reached his 76th birthday today, James McKinley gathered a few of his many friends on Sunday and celebrated the event in a most fitting manner.

When one has reached the age of Mr. McKinley who has passed his three score and ten years in life, it certainly must be a delightful pleasure for him to see his sons and daughters grown up to be men and women, who are an honor to him and to the community in which they reside.

James McKinley is traveling rapidly along life's pathway and is not as active a man as when he shouldered the musket in those dark days in 61 to 65 when the North and South fought their bloody battles. He was one of the brave boys who went when the call was made for volunteers, and was willing to sacrifice his life for his country. When bravely fighting for the Old Flag at Bermuda Hundred in Old Virginia he was badly wounded, a ball entered his right side above the hip bone which was never taken out and today he carries it in his body. This wound badly crippled him and really is the cause of his feeble health today. He was a member of Co F, 200 P. V. I. under the command of Col. Gibbons. He delights to tell his experiences while in the service and no doubt he can recall a great many pleasant incidents along with those that were hard to bear. He had a brother that starved to death in Libby Prison and one that laid down his life on the battle-field. Should not this man be honored and respected and talked of, a man who faced the foe, for you and I? We say yes, and may God spare his life many more years so that he can enjoy the good things o this world in his declining days.

The atmosphere of love and happiness abide in his home which is situated about a mile and a half up Moose Run from the town of Milesburg. He has a good, kind loving wife who has made his pathway through life bright and happy for him. His little farm is one of the best in that section of the county and shows that a whole lot of hard work has been done to make it what it is today. His father William McKinley who for a long time was boss roller at the Irvin and Gray's iron mills, (now known as McCoy's) moved into this section of the county sixty-five years ago, and he and his sons cleared the land, tilled the soil and built their homes.

It was certainly a pleasure for the scribe to mingle with this family on Sunday and we shall always remember the kindness they bestowed. When the dinner hour arrived the ladies spread the eatables out in the woods on long table clothes, and the good things to eat, why it was wonderful. Just to let you know what we did have you can read the following: roast chicken, roast beef, roast lamb, chip beef, cold sliced ham, potato salad, cucumber salad, cold slaw, beets, sweet pickles, spiced crab apples, chow chow, cheese, coffee, chocolate cake, devil's food, cookies, golden cake, lemon pie, apple pie, lemon custard, and cherry pie. Say, do you know the above was a feast fit for a king, and everyone present enjoyed the meal as much. After dinner a little sacred concert was held, and many beautiful selections rendered on the graphophone. A picture of the party was taken by Mr. Harry Lambert. Those present were James, Myra, William, Homer McKinley, Mr. and Mrs. William Lucas and children, Eva Watson, Frank, Sarah, Edward, William, Mrs. Ida Johnson, Aaron and Laura McKinley, Harry Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Dode Haupt, Ellis and Albert Bierley, Charley Watson and children, Harry Lambert, Isaac Bickle and wife, Mrs. William H. McKinley and children, Mrs. William C. McKinley and children, Mrs. Lucy Shaeffer and children of Pittsburg, and the scribe of the Daily News and Bellefonte Republican.

We wish Mr. McKinley many happy returns of the days, and hope that the balance of his days will be filled with blessings and happiness.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

Was That of Miss Ella Musser And Mr. John Bullock On Thursday Evening.

A very unpretentious but pretty wedding was that celebrated at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Musser, on East Lamb street, at 6:30 o'clock last evening, when their only daughter Miss Ella Catharine Musser became the bride of Mr John M. Bullock. Owing to the recent death of the bridegroom's uncle the wedding was a very quiet affair, only the immediate friends of the contracting parties being present. Notwithstanding this fact, however, the interior of the Musser residence was very prettily decorated with ferns and golden rod.

Rev. James B. Stein of the Methodist church, performed the ceremony and, the only attendant was Ella Musser the niece of the bride, as flower girl, while Miss Mary Woods, of Pine Grove Mills, played the wedding march. Following the ceremony the bridal party and few guests present were served with a very tempting wedding dinner and at 8.16 Mr. and Mrs. Bullock left on the train for a wedding journey which will include a visit to several eastern cities as well as a trip to Canada. Upon their return to Bellefonte they will go to housekeeping in one of Dr. Hayes' new houses on Curtin street.

Both the bride and bridegroom are too well known in Bellefonte to need any eulogies from us. The former is an accomplished young woman and has for some time past been associated with her father in business, while the latter is the junior member of the firm of Montgomery & Co., clothiers. At the train fully 500 young folks had gathered to wish the bride and groom God speed on their honey-moon. Cow and sleigh bells, horns and fiddles, rice and confetti were used in assisting the couple on the train. We wish them unbounded happiness through life.

A Beautiful Lawn Party.

On Thursday evening a delightful lawn party was held at the home of Mr. William Rider Jr. in honor of his sister Miss Katurah Rider the assistant Cashier in Joseph's store. Miss Rider has not taken any vacation this summer and her brother wishing to show his sister and her friends a good time gave this beautiful lawn party in her honor. The lawn in front of the Rider home on South Willowbank street was tastefully lit up by Japanese lanterns and certainly did present a beautiful sight. Games of all kinds were played and the evening passed away merrily, at the close of which long tables were spread in the spacious lawn and a feast fit for a King was spread. The happy young folks departed for their homes congratulating Miss Rider on having a brother who was so kind and considerate.

Dr. Wadsworth to Leave.

Considerable surprise was occasioned by the rumored resignation of Dr. Marshman Edward Wadsworth, dean of the school of mines at the Pennsylvania State College this week. The Pittsburg Dispatch stated that the resignation was a fact and that Dr. Wadsworth had accepted a professorship in the new department of the Western University of Pennsylvania. The announcement was confirmed by the authorities of the latter institution and that Dr. Wadsworth had accepted the the appointment, and would take full charge as soon as arrangements were completed for his release by the board of trustees of the Pennsylvania State College. For the good of old Penn State the News hopes that Dr. Wadsworth will reconsider his action and remain with the local institution.

Col. E. R. Chambers for District Attorney.

Colonel E. R. Chambers, in his letter accepting the nomination for District Attorney, said, "The farmer who works from day light to late evening at hard labor in order to meet his living expenses, should not be forced to pay extra taxes for mistakes made in our criminal courts. Larency, burglary and murder have run riot in our county of late, and if I am elected I pledge myself to brake this up and stop it without unnecessary expense to the tax-payer."

He is acknowledged to be the best criminal lawyer in this county. Will you vote for him?

PRISONERS BREAK JAIL

In the Light of Day two Prisoners Escaped

CLINTON COUNTY JAIL

Frank Barton and John Burkart are the Fugitives from the Clinton Co. Detectives—One Man Captured.

OTHER A DESERTER FROM THE ARMY

Two prisoners escaped from the Clinton county jail Saturday afternoon at about 2.45 o'clock, one of whom was recaptured shortly after, but the other man is still at large.

The two prisoners who got away were Frank Barton, who is charged with the larceny of a watch, and was waiting trial at court, and John Burkhart, who was in jail for conducting himself in a disorderly manner at Beck's hotel. It was also believed from statements made by Burkhart, that he was a deserter from the United States army, and he was being held more particularly to fully determine the truth or falsity of his statement. As the government officials wired that they had no record of Burkhart having enlisted, he would have been released from custody this week.

The escape had evidenely been carefully planned by the two men, and when the opportune time came they quickly acted. As is customary, the prisoners who are in jail for minor offenses, were allowed the use of the jail yard for a certain period of time, under the watch of the turnkey. Some of the prisoners were pitching quoits with horse shoes and others were looking on. While thus engaged, the bell at the jail entrance rang and the turnkey went front to admit a drunk who had been brought in by an officer. All the prisoners in the yard with the exception of Burkhart and Barton entered the corridor as far as the first iron grated door to see whom the new "boarder" was. During this brief time Burkhart and Barton, with one of the horseshoes, broke the iron bars in one of the small windows leading from the jail yard into the cellar. Once in the basement, nothing barred their progress, for they simply climbed out the cellar window leading into the alley on the east side of the jail, from which Alonzo Probst also made his escape, while assisting the turnkey in the cellar and while the latter went up stairs to admit a prisoner.

None of the residents near the jail saw the prisoners crowd out of the cellar and get away. Sheriff Mussina was in Renovo at the time on business, and was not aware that he lost two boarders until he arrived home on the 6 o'clock train.

After the men got out they separated, Burkhart going towards the river, which he followed until he come to Race street, when he turned south toward the P. and E. railroad. Officer Samuel H. Myers lives near the driving park on Race street and seeing Burkhart in the distance recognized him at once as he had assisted in arresting the fellow at Beck's hotel week before last. The officer couldn't understand what he was doing out of jail, but being so far out of the path of general travel, and acting rather suspiciously, Mr. Myers concluded he had broken out of jail. As soon as Burkhart saw the officer he started on a run and entered a corn field. He would not halt in response to the officer's yells, but kept on going, even when several shots were fired into the air. After a chase of half a mile through fields below the city, Mr. Myers captured his man and returned him to jail.

Barton, it is believed, went directly to the railroad and boarding a freight train, made good his escape. During the absence of the sheriff Saturday afternoon Chief of Police McClintick and Officer Myers telephoned and telegraphed to all nearby towns but up to this time no clue has been found as to Barton's whereabout.

The escaped prisoner was attired in woodsman's clothes, is of a dark complexion, wore black mustache and weighs 175 or 180 pounds.

—Twitmyer was an inexplicable puzzle to the Clearfield batters on Monday at Clearfield whose hits numbered only three. In the first four innings he pitched to only twelve men, none reaching first base. Clearfield's lone run when the game was about ended was snatched out of errors.

FRANK ARMSTRONG DIES.

Victim of Automobile Accident—Coroner Released Chauffeur.

Frank Armstrong, aged 20 of 5905 Hampton street, who sustained a fractured skull and body bruises in an automobile accident in Grant boulevard Saturday midnight, died early Monday morning at the West Penn hospital Pittsburg. Heart failure was the cause given. Coroner Armstrong later decided death was accidental, and Monday evening released A. J. Williams of 531 Mellon street, who was driving the automobile belonging to Walter Uhling of Negley avenue. Williams was attempting to escape obstructions in the street which he swerved into a pole and Armstrong was thrown out.

We feel very sorry to hear of Armstrong's death as he was one of the finest and brightest young men at the Bellefonte Academy, last year and had fully intended coming back this fall. He was a member of the "Gamma Beta Iota" fraternity and while among us won many warm and staunch friends.

Notwithstanding the inclement weather, the opera house being opened and the Theatorium in full sway an immense crowd attended the rink. Long before eight o'clock every pair of rollers were taken and the floor was crowded from 6:30 until long after 10 o'clock. The same old enthusiasm reigns in the hearts of the young folks as did last winter, and they go spinning around over the floor in merry, joyful way never fearing of falling. The Coleville band was there in all its glory and the music was a great deal better than last year. We don't like to find any fault with this great amusement but we do think that those who are professional skaters, should consider that a great many are just learning and no race as they did last winter in and around other skaters. It is very dangerous and in behalf of a great many people we ask Mr. Taylor to see that it is stopped. We expect to spend a great many pleasant evenings at the rink this winter and we hope that no one will be injured. Last year no one was hurt and every one enjoyed the sport so much.

The rink will open Wednesday and Saturday afternoons and evenings.

United Brethren Conference.

The services at the United Brethren church of this place and vicinity on next Sunday will close the work of the present conference year, the annual session of the Allegheny conference of that denomination, of which Altoona is a part, being scheduled to convene at Clearfield on Wednesday, September 18.

Bishop J. S. Mills, of Annville, Pa., will preside at the sessions, which will include several addresses as well as other interesting numbers.

The Allegheny conference is composed of two districts, of which Rev. G. W. Sherrick, D. D., of Huntingdon, Pa., and Rev. J. I. L. Ressler, of Westerville, O., are the presiding elders. At the close of the conference the presiding elders will announce the assignments of the various ministers for the ensuing year.

We sincerely hope that Rev. Spangler and his family return to Bellefonte. Since coming here they have won many warm friends. Rev. Spangler is a hard worker and is building our church up in a strong substantial way. Mrs. Spangler is an earnest "White Ribboner" and always takes an active part in the work of the W. C. T. U.

Well it was Laughable.

We may have left the comma out but we didn't loose our hats.

Every one in town knows our friend Eddie Winfield Cornelius Gates the lean lanky Abraham Lincoln looking young man who is the ambitious young reporter on the Gazette. Of course you do, everybody knows Eddie. Well, the night before the Business Men's picnic, Eddie bought one of those cheap 15 cent hats from John Sourbeck, so he would look pretty at the park. The next day while hanging half way out the car window on the way to the park, the wind stole the hat from his head. This happened on this side of Nigh Bank. Well Eddie got off the train and secured his lid, and waited for four hours and a half at Nigh Bank for another train to stop, but nit. Eddie he hiked her to Zion getting to the park at 3 p. m. His girl had the shoe box with the lunch and before Ed found her it was time to start home. He says he had a dandy, good time at the park and didn't get a cold.—

GENERAL JOHN WILEY

Now a Major General Appointed by Gov. Stuart

COMMAND OF DIVISION.

Col. Willis J. Hulings of Oil City Commander of the Sixteenth Regiment to be a Brigadier General and Assigned to 2nd Brigade.

COL. TAYLOR'S REG'T GOES UP HIGHER.

Harrisburg, August 29th.—General John A. Wiley, of Franklin, who has been in command of the Second Brigade of the National Guard of Pennsylvania since 1887, was appointed a major general and placed in command of the divsion by Governor Stuart today. The Governor also appointed Colonel Willis J. Hulings, of Oil City, commander of the Sixteenth Regiment to be a briadier general and assigned to the command of the Second Brigade, and Colonel Wendell P. Bowman, of Philadelphia, commander of the First Regiment, to be a brigadier general and assigned to the command of the First Brigade.

In announcing these appointments the Governor directs that elections be held for colonels of the First and Sixteenth Regiments. Colonel J. Lewis Good will probably succeed to the command of the First Regiment and Colonel George C. Rickards, of Oil City, will take Colonel Hulings' place as colonel of the Sixteenth Regiment.

These changes are the result of the resignation of General John W. Schall of Norristown, as major general, which was received at head-quarters today with the request that he be placed on the retired list. These changes will also make necessary the reorganization of the division staff and the staffs of the First and Second Brigades and changes in the staffs of the First and Sixteenth Regiments.

General Wiley's appointment at this time will enable him to serve as major general two years before he is retired under the Godcharles act, retiring officers at the age of 64 years. This act becomes operative on Monday next and provides that a major general who shall be appointed prior to the act becoming effective shall serve for two years thereafter. This provision in the law was inserted for the special benefit of General Wiley, who will reach the retirement age next Tuesday, and would have been forced on the retirement list at that time if he had not been appointed before the act takes effect.

Death of Lewis Markle at the Hospital.

Lewis Markle a charter member of the Bellefonte Tent No 100 Knights of the Maccabees died in the Bellefonte Hospital Saturday evening about 6 o'clock from anemia caused by an enlarged spleen augmented by getting over heated in the harvest field. He had been ailing for about a month having entered the hospital Aug 1.

Mr. Markle was a farmer by occupation comes from an old Centre county family his father being Samuel Markle of Pine Grove Mills where Lewis was born on Sept. 27, 1872 thus making him nearly 35 years of age. He served in the National Guard as a member of Co. B, for several years.

A large number of brothers and sisters mourn his demise being as follows: William of near Harrisburg; John of Pine Grove Mills; Mrs. Baker, of Nittany and Mrs. Tillman, Daniel, Nathan and Wallace all of Bellefonte. The funeral took place from the home of his brother Daniel Markle on High street at 2 o'clock this afternoon being under the auspices of the Bellefonte Tent No. 100 Knights of the Maccabees of which quite a large delegation met at their room in the Undine Hall and marched to the house under commander Laird Curtin from whence the body was carried the short distance to the cemetery by the pall-bearers who were members of the order where after prayer committed to the grave by Rev. Barry of the Lutheran church the beautiful last rites of the Maccabees funeral ceremeny was gone through after which the order returned to their rooms and passed appropriate resolutions.

A GREAT SUCCESS.

Tyrone Business Men Picnic at Hecla Park on Thursday.

One thousand people from Tyrone and Bellefonte attended the Tyrone Business Men's picnic at Hecla Park on Thursday.

It was certainly an ideal day for a picnic and the park was right in its beauty. The folks from up the way seemed to enjoy every thing so much and the day was passed in a merry, sociable way, we feel sure they went home feeling perfectly satisfied that they had selected our Park to come to spend this annual outing.

Outside of Sunday school picnic's we never saw so large a crowd of people at Hecla who were more orderly than our Tyrone friends. We noticed particularly that not a drunken or disorderly person was on the grounds.

The program of the day opened with a beautiful concert by the Symphony Orchestra under the leadership of Prof. Stein. The music was all that could be desired and was greatly appreciated by everyone. We can safely say that this was one of the best musical organizations at the Park this season.

The base ball game in the morning between the Tyrone Business Men and their clerks proved a very interesting affair and was won by the clerks by the close score of 5 to 3.

The tub race between Ugene Ammerman and John Herzog was a close contest and was won by Ammerman.

The potato race was won by Clyde Gates. Perhaps the most interesting part of the sports was the boxing match between Harry Widney and M. D. Hoffman, both young men were blindfolded and were guided around the ring by a helper, and sometimes they sent home some pretty good soakers, the contest was so evenly matched that at the end of the eighth round it was called off as draw.

One of the most amusing features of the day was the fat woman's and fat man's races which were won by Mrs. D. D. Sling, Mrs. Geo. Grazier, Mr. Harry Hays and Mr. W. C. Knode. The kid prize fight was a drawing card and caused a good bit of laughter.

In the afternoon another game of ball was played between some Tyrone sports and the Hecla Park team and was won by Hecla to a score of 7 to 3.

The quoit contest was won by James Jennings who defeated Howard Cowher. Five straight games were won by Jennings, Cowher didn't win any.

The nail driving contest between six women was all to the good and was won by Mrs. Grazier and Mrs. Wikerman.

The dancing seemed to capture the hearts of the largest part of the crowd, for the large dancing pavillion was crowded all day. It is certainly a pleasure to stand on the side lines and watch those happy, light-hearted young folks trip over the floor to the sweet strains of music, and it certainly must be a great pleasure for those who dance.

The boats on the lake were kept very busy all day and many enjoyed being rowed about over the shining waters. We are glad the Tyrone folks picnicked at our park and we extend to them a cordial invitation to come back again in 1908.

The Opening of the Bellefonte Academy.

The Bellefonte Academy will open its fall term on Wednesday, September 11, at nine o'clock, with a large attendence of pupils and a well selected corps of experienced teachers. The improvements, recently made, promise to make this the most pleasant and satisfactory year in the history of the Academy. The main building will be used by the students of Academic and B. Intermediate department, while the primary school will be conducted in the J. P. Hughes foundation hall, formerly known as the Beezer property, under the direction of Miss Helen Overton, assisted by Miss Jennie Harper and perhaps another teacher yet to be selected. The corps of teachers for main building is as follows:

Rev. Jas. P. Hughes, A. M. Mathematics and Book-keeping. James R. Hughes A. M. Latin, Greek and Oratory. Miss Helen Overton, Primary Work. Franklin T. Cole, B. S. Mathematics. Miss Isabel S. Hill, Ph. B. English. Arthur H. Shoop, A. B. Mathematics and Science. Sherwood E. Hall, A. B. Latin History. George L. Whiteford, B. S. Civics, Geography, Mathamatics and Book-keeping. Adolph B. Benson, B. S. French, German and Spanish. Rev. J. Allison Platte, Ph. D. Bible Lecturer.

Students from the country and county towns can secure special students' rates on all railroad lines, if they desire to attend the Academy. The school schedule is arranged to suit the railroad schedules.

SIXTY LIVES WERE LOST

When Big Bridge Fell Into the St. Lawrence River.

5 MILES FROM QUEBEC

Nearly a Hundred Men Went Down When the Work Collapsed—Death List May be Increased by Twenty.

BEING BUILT AT COST OF $10,000,000

Quebec, August 30.—A section of the great new bridge across the St. Lawrence river five miles below this city, collapsed shortly before six o'clock Thursday evening precipitating scores of bridge workers into the river.

It is estimated that the loss of life is sixty and may exceed that number by twenty.

The bridge was about a mile and a half in length and half of it dropped into the river below. Ninety men were at work and the whistle had just blown at 5:30 for the men to quit work when there came a blinding sound near the centre of the bridge and when the men turned to see what had happened a cry went up: "The bridge is falling!"

The men made a rush for safety but the distance was too great. The falling sections dragged others after it. Only a few of the men reached safety.

Nearly all the men drowned were employed by the Phoenix Bridge company of Pennsylvania and of sub-contractors on the work of construction. At ten o'clock Thursday night fifteen bodies had been found and eight more in the hospital expected to die. The disaster had caused the wildest excitement. The bridge was an international construction and the contract called for its completion in 1909. It is being built at a cost of $10,000,000.

CASTORIA.
Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. The Kind You Have Always Bought

A Meeting of The Spanish American War Veterans.

A meeting of the Spanish American war veterans was held in the Armory on Friday evening, quite a number of the young vets turned out and formulated plans to organize a camp in Bellefonte. The charter was held open for any other of the boys who were out in 98 and didn't receive word of last nights meeting. Another meeting will be held in the Armory on Sunday afternoon September the 8" at 3 o'clock.

So many of the young men are working at different places and it was thought advisable to hold this meeting on this date so that all could be there. Sunday afternoon September 8th the next meeting will be held and it is earnestly hoped that all the boys will be present.

James Emerick.

At 7 o'clock Tuesday evening James Emerick, an old and well known resident of Altoona died at his home, 2314 Fourth avenue, of senile debility after an illness covering a period of several weeks. Deceased was born in Centre county on November 7th, 1822, and had been a resident of the city for the past twenty-six years. He was a wagon maker by occupation and conducted a wagon making establishment during his long residence here. He was a member of the Presbyterian church and is survived by his wife, six sons and two daughters as follows: John, of Bellefonte; Thomas, of Pittsburg; William, George, James D. and Frank, of Altoona; Mrs. Eliza Walter, of Bellefonte, and Mrs. William Coltbaugh, of Altoona. The funeral services will be conducted at the house at 7.30 o'clock Thursday evening and on the 7.30 train Friday morning the remains will be brought to Bellefonte for interment.

Cantata

The first cantata held in central and western Pennsylvania took place at Mann's school house in Curtin township this county on last Sunday Aug. 25th, under the personal supervision and controll of Missioner Crittiden of Bellefonte who was ably assisted by John E. Yeager Frank Daley and wife of Orvis and a host of others whose melodeous voices blended in sweet harmony in this sacred song service. It is just right here to say that Curtin township seems to take the lead and as a consequence dont have to follow and it was in this township and at Mann's school house that "Arbor day" was first properly observed in Centre county. Hurrah for Curtin twp.

FENCING OUT RATTLERS.

A Precaution of Animals That Man Uses to Advantage.

Did you ever hear of a rattlesnake fence—not one made of rattlesnakes, of course not, but one made of prickly thorns to protect one from the rattlers and keep them away? That is what the Arizona campers build, and the only way to keep these deadly poisoners away is by building one of these fences of oktea, a shrub covered with thorns which grows on the desert.

As the tents have no doors and are not set much above the ground, it would appear easy for Mr. Rattler to effect an entrance. Imagine the sensation of crawling into bed some cold night to strike against the clammy skin of a snake, and this is just where Mr. Snake likes to snuggle, in among the warm blankets.

To avoid this men who work in the mines have found that a snake will not go near this oktea, and they have built closely knit fences around their tents, with little gates to go in and out, and beyond this the rattler will not penetrate. It was first the Indians of the desert who discovered this deadly shrub, and they got the secret from birds and animals, which, to protect their young, travel sometimes many miles back and forth, bringing the thorns with which to cover their little nests. Gophers and other small animals there cover their nests in this manner.

It is strange that in that country, so dry and forbidding, many things grow in exuberance, and especially noticeable are the great fields of Brown Eyed Susans, the yellow daisies with the brown centers. They grow so high and wild that you can step in a field and your head will just peep over the top of the nodding sea of bright eyed faces.—Los Angeles Times.

Boil It Down!

It is the short piece, be it letter or editorial, that catches the reader, and correspondents who wish their letters to be read should never extend them beyond a quarter of a column, and half that length is preferable. Condensation is an art, but it can be acquired with a little practice. Never try to see how long you can make your article, but how short. Use never a superfluous sentence or word. Be as brief as an intelligible statement of the case will allow and you will have ten readers where the long winded fellow will have one.—Richmond Dispatch.

Given Back.

Never say of anything, "I have lost it," but, "I have given it back." Is your child dead? It has been given back. Is your wife dead? She has been given back. Is your estate taken away? Well, and is not that likewise given back? "But he who took it away is a bad man." What is it to you by whose hands he who gave it has demanded it back again? While he allows you to possess it, take care of it, but as of something not your own, as travelers do of an inn.—Epictetus.

Seven Moons In One Night.

It is said that at Sonoma, Cal., the full moon rises and sets seven times in one night. The Indians call the place Sonoma valley, which means the "valley of many moons." The explanation is that there is a certain peak east of the town toward which you have to look to see the queer phenomenon, the mountain being so formed there that the moon rises into sight and sinks out of it seven times in succession.

Finance.

The agreeable visitor, says Judge, smiled upon the son of the house and said:

"Willie, if you recite that poem your mother taught you I'll give you a penny."

"Not likely! I can get a nickel anywhere for not reciting it," Willie replied.

Words of Praise

For the several ingredients of which Dr. Pierce's medicines are composed, as given by leaders in all the several schools of medicine, should have far more weight than any amount of non-professional testimonials. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has THE BADGE OF HONESTY on every bottle-wrapper, in a full list of all its ingredients printed in plain English.

If you are an invalid woman and suffer from frequent headache, backache, gnawing distress in stomach, periodical pains, disagreeable, catarrhal, pelvic drain, dragging-down distress in lower abdomen or pelvis, perhaps dark spots or specks dancing before the eyes, faint spells and kindred symptoms caused by female weakness, or other derangement of the feminine organs, you can not do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

The hospital, surgeon's knife and operating table may be avoided by the timely use of "Favorite Prescription" in such cases. Thereby the obnoxious examinations and local treatments of the family physician can be avoided and a thorough course of successful treatment carried out in the privacy of the home. "Favorite Prescription" is composed of the very best native medicinal roots known to medical science for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments, contains no alcohol and no harmful or habit-forming drugs.

Do not expect too much from "Favorite Prescription;" it will not perform miracles; it will not disolve or cure tumors. No medicine will. It will do as much to establish vigorous health in most weaknesses and ailments peculiarly incident to women as any medicine can. It must be given a fair chance by perseverance in its use for a reasonable length of time.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this remedy of known composition.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence is guarded as sacredly secret and womanly confidences are protected by professional privacy. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets the best laxative and regulator of the bowels. They invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. One a laxative; two or three a cathartic. Easy to take as candy.

DRESS OF THE ESKIMO.

Made by the Women From the Skins of Northern Animals.

The chief material of the clothing of the Eskimo is the skin of the reindeer, which is used in various stages of pelage or tanning. Fine, short haired summer skins, especially those of does and fawns, are used for making dress garments and underclothes. The heaviest winter skins furnish extra warm jackets for cold weather. The white spotted skins of the tame Siberian reindeer are especially valued for full dress jackets.

The skins of the white mountain sheep, white and blue fox, wolf, dog, ermine and lynx are sometimes made into clothing. Underjackets of elder duck skins are often pressed into service. Sealskin dressed with the hair on is used only for breeches and boots, and for those rarely. Of late years drilling and calico have been introduced into the makeup of some of the minor garments.

The dress of the men consists of a loose hooded frock without opening except at the neck and wrists. This reaches just over the hips and very rarely to midthigh, where it is cut off square and usually confined by a girdle at the waist. Under this garment is worn a similar one of lighter skin and sometimes without a hood. The thighs are clad in one or two pairs of tight fitting knee breeches, rather loose, but fitted to the shape of the leg. They are very low in front, but are much higher behind, sometimes as high as the small of the back. They are held in place by a girdle or thong around the waist and are usually fastened below the knee over the boots with a drawstring.

On the legs and feet are worn, first, a pair of long deerskin stockings, with the hair inside, then slippers of tanned sealskin, in the bottom which is spread a layer of whalebone shavings and outside a pair of close fitting boots, held in place by a string around the ankle, which reaches above the knee and ends with a rough edge covered by the breeches. Dress boots often end in an ornamental border, with drawstring just below the knee. The boots are of reindeer skin, with white sealskin soles for winter and dry weather, but in summer waterproof boots of white whaleskin are worn. Overshoes of the same material, reaching just above the ankles, are sometimes worn over the winter boots.

The women wear tight fitting deerskin pantaloons, with the hair next the skin, and outside of these a similar pair made of the skins from deer legs, with the hair out, and having soles of sealskin, but no ankle strings. The women's pantaloons, like those of the men, are fastened with a girdle just above the hips. It appears that they do not stay up very well, as the women are continually hitching them up and tightening their girdles, like some old sailor.

Until they reach manhood the boys wear pantaloons like the women, but their jackets are cut just like those of the men.

The well to do Eskimos generally own several complete suits of clothes and present a neat appearance when not engaged in dirty work. The poorer classes wear one suit for all occasions until it becomes shabby. New clothes are seldom put on till winter. The outer frock is not often worn in the igiu, or hut home, being usually taken off before entering the room.

At present there is no such thing as an Eskimo tailor, for the women of each Eskimo household usually make the garments of all the members of the family. Not only this, but the Eskimos are extremely conservative in the matter of changes in the style of their raiment and respond very slowly to the modernizing influences in this particular which have reached their neighborhood.

Convict Regiments.

At the beginning of the eighteenth century the British army had a bad reputation at home, and it was very difficult to get recruits for it. For this reason it was officially proposed to find the men by an impressment falling on "any sturdy beggar, fortune teller or the like idle, unknown, suspected fellow in the parish; or, if there be none such, then any one that has already been in a gaol or before a justice of the peace for his idle, disorderly life." The advice was acted upon. Debtors were released from prison on promising to join the army or the navy, criminals were pardoned on the same terms, and persons with no visible means of subsistence were marched off to death and glory. The system worked out better than might have been expected. In the peninsular war, for instance, three new regiments were composed entirely of convicts, and one made for itself an illustrious name.

New England and Napoleon.

The hostility of New Englanders to the first Napoleon was sincere and deep. A remarkable instance of this feeling is to be found in the manner in which the townsmen of Boston received the news of his first abdication. The incident has been brought to notice through an interesting exhibit in the historical collections of the public library of that city. It is a ticket admitting the bearer to a "solemn festival at the Stone chapel, in commemoration of the goodness of God in delivering the Christian world from military despotism. Boston, June, 1814."

THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

A Member May Drink There, but Is Not Allowed to Eat.

The British house of commons has its own code in regard to the partaking of liquid and solid refreshments. A member making a long speech may take a drink, and the house is liberal enough not to care whether the color of the contents of the glass is white or brown or black, whether, in fact, the glass holds water or whisky or beer. Mr. Gladstone's egg flips, which his wife carefully compounded for him and he brought to the house in a bottle, are classic.

But woe betide the man who scorns drink and must have meat. Contemporary recollection only recalls one member rash enough to disregard this rule. It was a number of years ago, in the stormy time of the home rule debates, that an Irish member, in the small hours of the morning, produced from his pocket a paper bag and drew out a bun, which he proceeded calmly to eat. The house was instantly in an uproar. There were loud cries of "Order! Order!" and that bun was never finished.

No member may read a newspaper in the house. If he had the temerity to smoke, the sergeant at arms would quickly place him under lock and key. —Appleton's Magazine.

Mexican Church Legends.

Queretaro was a town before the Spanish conquest and was made a city in 1655. A legend of Queretaro is that an Otomite chief, Fernando de Tapia by name, undertook to convert the city to Christianity in a way that seems novel to us, but was common enough to his day. He came from Tula with a challenge to the people of Queretaro to a fair stand up fight. If he won, the people surviving were to be baptized. The challenge was accepted, but while the fight was in progress a dark cloud came up and the blessed Santiago was seen in the heavens with a fiery cross, whereupon the people of Queretaro gave up and were baptized. They set up a stone cross to commemorate the event on the site of the present church of Santa Cruz. There is scarcely a church in Mexico which has not a legend of this kind attached to it.

Misjudged.

The manager of an office had advertised for an office boy. In consequence he was annoyed for an hour by a straggling line of boys of all sizes, claiming various accomplishments.

"Well," he said to a late applicant, "I suppose you can read anything, and write anything, and figure a little, and use the typewriter a little, and"—

"Naw!" interrupted the boy. "If I could do all them things I'd strike yer fer yer own job. I ain't nothin' but an office boy."

He got the position.—Bohemian.

A BOLD PROJECT.

The Scheme by Which Malet Nearly Captured Paris In 1812.

A bold scheme was that engineered by Malet, a Frenchman. Malet had been a republican general, was ruined by the rise of Napoleon, betook himself to plotting, was arrested and finally put in a madhouse. During the emperor's absence in Russia in 1812 Malet escaped one night from his prison, obtained a general's uniform and with an accomplice dressed as an aid-de-camp made his way to the prison of La Force, where the unsuspecting governor released on his command two other ex-republicans, Generals Laborie and Guidal, prisoners on a like charge to his own. Together they proceeded to a neighboring barracks, announced to the commandant that Napoleon was dead and that they were acting by the decree of the senate, ordered the troops to be paraded and dispatched bodies of men upon various duties. Some arrested Savary, the minister of police; others the police prefect. Another battalion seized the Hotel de Ville. Everybody obeyed Malet implicitly, even the prefect of the Seine, and he would undoubtedly have gained possession of Paris had he not been recognized by Laborde, chief of the military police, as an escaped prisoner. He was arrested after a scuffle, the plot was unraveled, and in due course Malet, with twenty-three of his abettors, was shot.

Ancient and Modern Bathing.

Soap is really quite a new factor in the world's life. Most of our ancestors were filthy and dissembled the fact by the use of stifling perfumes. Washing one's hands, which was only done by the very best people, meant dipping the fingers in rose water and drying them on a napkin. Even the Romans of the decadence, who were probably cleaner as a community than any before or since, bathed in water and rubbed themselves with oil. It sounds nasty to us, but then so does, for example, Chinese music, which millions of human beings think delightful.

COMEDY IN A CEMETERY.

Old Chestnut Seller of Genoa and Her Fortune Hunting Spouse.

It does not seem possible that one could run across a comedy in such a solemn place as a cemetery, yet there is, so the optimist assures us, a little comedy in every situation. Surely in the romance of the old chestnut seller of Genoa and the chagrin of her fortune hunting spouse, both of whom figure in the local gossip and one of whom is immortalized in marble in the Campo Santo, one must admit that the situation is not without its lighter side. The most serious minded smile as they read the inscription which the shrewd old lady commanded the sculptor to chisel on her tomb.

Not so many years ago, so the story runs, one of the best known figures in the streets of Genoa was that of an old woman who made a living selling chestnuts. She was without beauty, but was gifted with a quality which no doubt stood her in better stead—a native shrewdness which enabled her to buy her wares prudently and to sell them with a profit. It does not require a large income to live in Genoa, especially when one has not acquired extravagant tastes, so gradually the fortune of the worthy toiler grew and finally became large enough to be talked about. A lad more noted for his good looks than for principle or intellect caught the rumor of the fortune, sought the chestnut merchant and made straight for her heart, which was not long in responding. The subsequent marriage of the pair caused the knowing ones to smile.

After a short honeymoon it was brought to the notice of interested neighbors that the young husband was in search of work. His elderly bride disclaimed all knowledge of the rumored fortune and said that, as she was almost without a penny, she expected that he, too, would put his shoulder to the wheel. Between them a comfortable home might be supported and an occasional evening at the theater might be enjoyed. Not even yet having given up hope that the fortune would one day appear, the young husband led for a time an exemplary life, but finally patience gave place to discouragement, and love's young dream was shattered. Several years later the deserted wife died, and, like a mushroom in the night, sprang up in a conspicuous place in the Campo Santo a handsome monument representing, aside from the plot which it occupied, a snug fortune. The marble statue, of life size, represents the old lady, dressed in full gathered skirt, silk apron, fringed shawl and a rosary wound around her fingers. Lest there should be a doubt about the history of the original and her romance the entire story is set upon the pedestal of the statue, explaining how the lady had been wooed, not, as she knew at the time, for her beauty or her virtue, but for her fortune, and how she had thwarted her mercenary lover by the purchase of this lasting memorial, which not only represented her husband's disappointment, but might also serve as a warning to others. The statue is one of the most striking in the entire place.—Leslie's Weekly.

No Mail For Him.

"Yes," remarked the driver, as his leaders swept round the turn into a lightly timbered stretch of level road in the Australian "bush," "you may not believe it, but those kangaroos are as clever as people." Then, in response to the inquiry of a passenger who contributes the story to Cassell's Magazine, he proceeded to tell why.

"Now, there's Moloney," he continued, "who owns the section on the other side of the creek. He trained one of them to meet the coach every week and get the letters for him.

"The kangaroo's pouch comes in real handy, ye see," he added, with the humor that belongs to the stage driver the world over.

Presently, as often happens on a quiet country road, a fine kangaroo, disturbed by the approach of his majesty's royal mail, came into view, as he raised himself from the grass where he had been feeding and looked toward the coach with an innocent, inquiring air.

The driver glanced at him and shook his head.

"Nothing for you today, old man!" he called genially.

The kangaroo, as if that was all he had been waiting for, hopped quickly out of view among the trees, to the amazement of the box seat traveler and intense enjoyment of the other occupants of the coach.

Careful Boy.

Two American tourists on their way to Abbotsford were in doubt about the road to take and the time it would occupy to get there. Hailing a lad who happened to be passing, they put the necessary questions. The native replied by showing the route, but did not know how long it would take to get there. The tourists resumed their journey, but had scarcely gone a hundred yards when a shout from the boy made them turn.

"It will take you an hour," called the boy at the pitch of his voice.

"Then why the deuce didn't you tell us that before?" returned one of the Americans.

ONE BOLD PIECE OF WORK.

The Way Two Persistent Tariff Dodgers Scared a Ship's Captain and Escaped the Inspectors—A Poll Parrot That Told Tales Out of School.

In the early nineties of the last century the precautions observed by the officers of the United States treasury department in preventing or rather attempting to prevent the successful smuggling of dutiable goods into this country were as adequate in their scope and as rigidly applied as they are today. This means that the achievements of two smugglers, who may be called Harry White and Richard Bergen, need by no means be regarded as insignificant. For years they plied their trade upon the various transatlantic liners, and when at length their system was laid bare through the acumen of government agents, their ingenuity still served to prevent the just punishment of many other offenders.

The smuggling White and Bergen did was confined to trunks full of nickel or silver plated German and Swiss watches, English cutlery, woolens and tweeds. In the aggregate, however, it may safely be ventured that the revenue of the nation suffered more through these two men than through the occasional successes of diamond smugglers.

Inevitably of course as their triumphs increased in duration and proportion, the leak forced itself upon the notice of the customs officers. White and Bergen did not know this. Agents of the treasury department in England and on the continent were set to work, and eventually suspicion was fastened upon Bergen, who was in London engaged in the wholesale purchase of table cutlery. The two smugglers were never abroad together, it being part of the system for one to remain at New York.

The government agents watched Bergen for a fortnight. One of them was never far off when a purchase was made, and when the object of suspicion booked on a certain liner that fact, together with a complete list of the dutiable articles in his possession, was cabled to Washington. The vessel was due past Sandy Hook on May 16, 189--, and the custom house inspectors had prepared a distinguished welcome for the man whom they had long regarded as their special bete noire.

Bergen was accomplished and genial, frequented the smoking room night and day and was popular with card players and the passengers in general. One morning when the steamer was a few miles east of Fire island there came a cry from the lookout, "Man in small boat in distress off the port bow!" The captain descried a man standing up in a small sloop, the mast of which was shattered and the craft somewhat down by the head. She was drifting to sea, and the captain signaled for full speed astern, altered his course a trifle and finally came near enough to the occupant of the sailboat to throw him a line, by which, wet and bedraggled, he was hauled to the deck, amid the cheers of the passengers. If Bergen felt surprise as he saw his fellow conspirator White sprawled on deck, he gave no indication of it. In due time the ocean waif disappeared from among the passengers.

Developments were not long delayed. The liner was approaching the Sandy Hook light vessel when Bergen, wild of eye, with hair disheveled and cheeks flushed, sought the privilege of an immediate and private interview with the ship's chief executive. He was taken into the chart room, where, falling on his knees before the captain, he begged him never to divulge what he was about to tell, and then he unfolded a terrible plot which he had conceived of destroying the vessel and her passengers.

He was a Fenian, he said, and had been selected by his comrades to place an infernal machine in the hold of the British vessel. Clockwork was attached to the bomb, he declared, and it was timed to go off within twenty minutes. He had remained firm in his deadly venture throughout the trip, but now at the crucial moment a little boy with whom he had played about deck and had grown to love had swerved him from his purpose. He said that the bomb was contained within a huge leather trunk, and he begged the captain to have it heaved overboard before the mechanism ticking away the life of the ship should have time to do its work.

The captain was a man of action, and before the last words were out of Bergen's mouth he was on deck, summoning the watch to quarters.

"Into the baggage room all of you," he roared, "and jack every piece of baggage on deck!"

The crew set to work. Trunk after trunk was hauled out, while Bergen stood beside the captain, shivering in excess of emotion. Suddenly he caught the officer by the arm.

"That's it!" he cried, pointing to an enormous trunk.

"All right," replied the captain. "Now, then, men," pointing to the designated piece of baggage, "over with it, and in a hurry! Heave it way out! If any part of it hits this ship you're all dead men! Over now!"

As the liner slid into quarantine two secret service agents and a dozen custom house inspectors hurried up the ladder from the revenue cutter. Nothing was said to Bergen until the declarations of the passengers were signed, wherein it was stated that Bergen had no dutiable goods. Then the suspected smuggler was surrounded by half a dozen inspectors.

No man in the group was less agitated than Bergen, smiling, puffing easily upon a black cigar and returning look for look with level eyes. Why had he not declared his baggage? That was an easy question. He had no baggage. But the officers knew better. They even had a description of the trunk, and thus armed the captain was ordered to open the baggage compartment. When the revenue men recited their reasons for this demand, with a description of the trunk they expected to find, a great white light dawned upon the skipper's mind, and the detectives swore vainly as they realized that though their quarry was run down, all the evidence against him was gone.

Once there lived in one of the foreign quarters of New York a learned ornithologist. He knew more about birds than most men know about anything. He stuffed and mounted them too. Not infrequently his researches took him abroad. In fact, he was a regular voyager to Europe, spending the greater part of his sojourn invariably in France, whence he returned with many quaint and curious birds, stuffed, mounted, ready for exhibition. This savant and his birds became so familiar to the customs inspectors that they finally examined his baggage and his stock in the most perfunctory way.

Once when in Paris the ornithologist picked up a wonderful talking parrot which he purchased at the owner's price and made a pet of. He was fond of talking, and the bird was speedily taken into his confidence. Yet through all the grim fact that Poll would be worth more to him dead than alive constantly obtruded itself, so much so that several times a day he said to the parrot, "Poll, pretty Poll, when you are dead I shall stuff you full of nice fat diamonds and take you to America."

In good season the ornithologist, with his collection of stuffed birds and his parrot, set sail for New York on one of the French liners leaving Havre. At the pier several inspectors greeted him as an old acquaintance, and one of them fumbled carelessly among the various trunks and boxes, until eventually Poll, sitting placidly in her cage was brought to light.

"Ah, a parrot!" said the inspector "Can she talk, professor?"

"Ah!" exclaimed the savant delightedly. "Can she talk? Well, maybe!" He crooked forefinger at the bird, which opened her bill—and talked:

"Poll—Poll—Polly—pretty Poll, when you are dead—when you are dead—are dead—are dead, I shall stuff you full of—full of—I stuff—stuff—stuff you full of diamonds."

The rest was easy for the inspectors.—Lawrence Perry in New York Tribune.

The Chick In the Egg.

Almost every one knows that if a hen's egg is kept under suitable conditions for about three weeks a fully formed and developed chick will emerge from the shell, but when a fresh egg is opened no sign of an organism is present. However, at one side of the yolk is a minute cell which contains the vital principle of the future fowl, and, strange as it may seem, this cell begins to eat the contents of the eggshell and transforms them into tissues of the chick. This process may be watched by holding the egg to the light, when the developing of the chick may be followed from hour to hour. When the chick comes out of the shell it is not dependent on its parent's body for food, but is capable of picking up worms and seeds and digesting them. It will be noticed that the hen supplies enough material in an egg to produce a fully formed progeny, and the chick is not started out in life with imperfectly formed organs.—Dr. Henry Dwight Chapin in North American Review.

A Tax Scheme That Failed.

Switzerland has always prided itself on its independence, and in fiscal matters this proud spirit, which will brook no interference with the rights of the individual, even by the state in quest of revenue, has sometimes been exhibited in curious ways, says the Pall Mall Gazette. As the inquisitorial methods of income tax collectors are abhorrent to the freedom loving Swiss, boxes were once or twice set up in several cantons to receive the voluntary contributions of loyal citizens. It was hoped that this method of relying on the public spirit of the people would prove successful in raising money for public ends; but, alas for human nature, in the course of a few years the collectors on opening the boxes found nothing but—trouser buttons. So the voluntary system, after fair trial, had to be reluctantly abandoned in favor of a declaration of capital and income, which is liable to official investigation.

Maddening.

A gentleman was attending a lecture one evening when he saw, two seats ahead of him, a man whom he took to be an acquaintance. Having no other way to attract his attention, he asked a stranger sitting next to him to poke the supposed acquaintance with his umbrella. As the disturbed man turned his head the gentleman discovered that he was not the person he had supposed, so he fastened his gaze attentively on the lecturer, leaving the man with the umbrella to settle with the man he had disturbed, an embarrassing and difficult task. At last the man with the umbrella turned rather indignantly to the gentleman.

"Didn't you ask me to poke that gentleman with my umbrella?"

"Yes."

"And why did you ask me?"

"I wanted to see whether you would do it!" was the reply.

When a man seeks your advice he generally wants your praise.—Chesterfield.

LEGEND OF THE BOUNTY.

A British Brig Whose Ghost Still Sails the South Seas.

So famous has become the Flying Dutchman and the story of the punishment visited for impiety upon her captain that the yarn has overshadowed many others equally good. There is, for instance, the tale still told in the atolls of the south seas concerning the brig Bounty, of mutiny fame, which, for dramatic intenseness, far outweighs it.

As a tale of adventure few, if any, stories of real life can exceed in tragic detail the story of the mutiny of the British brig of war Bounty. Her men, disheartened and oppressed by a tyrannical captain, set upon their officers and, murdering some, set the rest afloat in open boats. Then the mutineers sailed to a deserted island, first taking unto themselves wives of the daughters of the islanders, and their descendants still live on a rocky island in the south Pacific. For years after the mutiny the whereabouts of the ship and her crew was unknown, and she was supposed to have foundered at sea. Naturally stories, weaving themselves from the phantasmagoria of the sea, were told concerning her at the wharves where seamen congregated and finally crystallized into one grewsome yarn which might have served Coleridge as the framework for his "Rime of the Ancient Mariner." Any old whaler in Frisco can tell the legend which is the white man's contribution to the romance swathed south sea islands.

She, like the death ship seen by the Ancient Mariner, comes sweeping down on a vessel when the wind has fallen and the ship lies "idle as a painted ship upon a painted ocean." Her dead crew are at quarters, and her murdered officers are still on the quarter deck, but there is no flag flying. Aft, at the taffrail, a man is struggling to raise the bunting, but, as the old whaler will tell you, he can't—"God won't let him." The planking of the ship is covered with mold, and her sails, worn by countless winds, are thin as lace, letting the sun through in golden arabesques. All is order and discipline aboard as she sails slowly by the becalmed whaler, the white water under her forefoot and her wake trailing behind, a glittering furrow. She swings wide as she comes near, the sun glances for a moment on her gossamer canvas and—she is not. She "goes out like a slush lamp in a blow," say old shellbacks who have seen her.—New York Herald.

Bold Yankee Engineers.

The operations of Yankee engineers are a source of constant wonder and bewilderment to all foreigners. The daring way in which the Americans blow up mountains that come in their way or string bridges over seemingly impassable canyons almost takes their breath away.

On one job in South America a contractor used about $80,000 worth of powder in blasting. He employed 8,000 men and completed a piece of work in less than three months that local authorities said could not be done inside of ten years.

He put 3,000 kegs of powder in one blast, and when the shot went off it sent over 700 train loads of rock down a cliff into the river. There was such a mass of debris that it raised the water of the stream fifty-five feet in less than twenty minutes. The channel had to be blasted out to let the water through. The force of this immense charge was so great that it sent huge bowlders the size of box cars sailing over the hill like a flock of buzzards flying over a barn.—Toledo Blade.

Dog Seeks Aid For Horse.

Frisk, a beautiful coach dog and Jack, a fine bay two-year-old of trotting stock, were raised together on our farm and became fast friends, sleeping in the same stall and, in fact, were almost inseparable. Jack had been overfed on new oats, resulting in a severe attack of colic, which often proves fatal to horses in a short time. About midnight Frisk awakened us by scratching at the door and barking as if in great distress. Upon opening the door to ascertain the cause of the uproar, the dog pleadingly stood up on his hind feet, putting his paws against me and whined most pitifully, then started toward the barn in the same appealing manner. My curiosity being thoroughly aroused, I followed and, before reaching the barn, could hear Jack kicking and groaning. To cure him was an easy matter. Years afterward Jack was a "favorite" in many races, and Frisk was still a close and loyal protector, guarding Jack from all intruders who sought entrance without the trainer or myself.—Chicago Tribune.

Huxley and Arnold.

Dean Farrar records in his "Men I Have Known" an amusing and perfectly good natured retort which Matthew Arnold provoked from Professor Huxley, for the better appreciation of which it may be added that the "sweetness and light," of which Mr. Arnold wrote, were exemplified in his own very airy and charming manners.

I sometimes met Huxley in company with Matthew Arnold, and nothing could be more delightful than the conversation elicited by their contrasted individualities.

I remember a walk which I once took with them both through the pleasant ground of Paris Hill, where Mr. Arnold's cottage was. He was asking Huxley whether he liked going out to dinner parties, and the professor answered that, as a rule, he did not like it at all.

"Ah," said Mr. Arnold, "I rather like it. It is rather nice to meet people."

"Oh, yes," replied Huxley, "but we are not all such everlasting Cupids as you are."

I will mail you free, to prove merit samples of my Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and my Book on either Dyspepsia, The Heart or Kidneys. Troubles of the stomach, Heart or Kidneys, are merely symptoms of a deeper ailment. Don't make the common error of is treating symptom only. Symptomt treatment is treating the result of your ailment the cause. Weak Stomach nerves—the inside nerves—mean Stomach weakness, always. And the heart, and Kidneys, as well, have their controlling or inside nerves. Weaken these nerves, and you inevitably have weak vital organs. Here is where Dr. Shoop's Restoartive has made its fame. No other remedy even claims to treat the "inside nerves". Also for bloating, biliousness, bad breath or complexion, use Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Write me today for sample and free Book. Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. The Restorative is sold by Green's Pharmacy.

John Riha, a prominent dealer of Vining, Ia., says: "I have been selling DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills for about a year and they give better satisfaction than any pill I ever sold. There are a dozen people here who have used them and they give perfect satisfaction in every case. I have used them myself with fine results." Sold by Green's Pharmacy.

WEAK HEARTS
are caused by Indigestion. If you eat a little too much, or if you are subject to attacks of Indigestion, you have no doubt had shortness of breath, rapid heart beats, heartburn or palpitation of the heart.

Indigestion causes the stomach to expand—swell, and puff up against the heart. This crowds the heart and interferes with its action, and in the course of time the heart becomes diseased.

Kodol
For Dyspepsia
digests what you eat, takes the strain off of the heart, and contributes nourishment, strength and health to every organ of the body. For Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach, Inflammation of the mucous membranes lining the Stomach and Digestive Tract, Nervous Dyspepsia and Catarrh of the Stomach.

After eating, my food would distress me by making my heart palpitate and I would become very weak. Finally I got a bottle of Kodol and it gave me immediate relief. After using a few bottles I am cured.

MAN TO MAN.

Opened the Garman Opera House on Monday Evening.

The Herald Square Stock Company opened the Opera House Monday night to one of the largest crowds that has ever assembled at the Garman, and we can safely say that a more pleased audience has never before been within its walls. The company is a strong and evenly balanced one, and in "Man to Man" gave all an equal chance to display their abilities. Terrific applauses and numerous curtain calls were in evidence during the performance. The scenic effects were among the handsomest ever seen on the local stage, the entire fun acts being carried by the company. The vaudeville introduced between the acts were far superior to any appearing here, and which alone was worth more than the prices of admission asked for the entire show, among those scoring a tremendhus hit was Miss Mae Dale in illustrated songs, and she was the sweetest singer that has ever been ones delight to hear. Coldwell and Enright a very clever sketch team, at once captured their audience by their clever work they being compelled to respond to numerous encores.

Prof. Ritter's moving pictures, and Harry Rennels in funny sayings proved a delight, while Dillan & Dale kept the audience in one continual roar of laughter. All in all the Herald Square Stock Co., is by far the best popular priced attraction that has ever appeared here, and no doubt will pack the theater at every performance during their stay here. Tonight they present a play never before seen in Bellefonte, the title of which is "Wanted A Husband" said to be one of the funniest plays on the American stage. There will also be an entire change specialties.

Bellefonte Furnace in Operation.

Tuesday morning a 8:30 Miss Elizabeth Gephart lit the fire at the Bellefonte furnace and started the big iron maker in operation. Col. Clement president of the company was present to see that everything moved alright. The furnace is in just as good shape as it was when it was built. They employ several hundred men and make on an average of 100 ton of iron a day.

When your Watch Stops

You cannot make it go by shaking it.

When the bowels are constipated you can disturb them with cathartics but, like the watch, they will not be able to do their allotted work until they are put into proper condition to do it.

One cannot mend a delicate piece of mechanism by violent methods, and no machine made by man is as fine as the human body.

The use of pills, salts, castor-oil and strong cathartic medicines is the violent method. The use of the herb tonic laxative, is the method adopted by intelligent people.

Lane's Family Medicine

Headache, backache, indigestion, constipation, skin diseases—all are benefited immediately by the use of this medicine.

Druggists sell it at 25c. and 50c.

BRIEF MENTION

Short Items of Local Interest Gathered By The Way Side

—Delightful showers on Labor Day.

—Mrs. Patsy Stuart is quite ill at her home on Linn street.

—Miss Helen Ceader entertained Monday afternoon at her home on Allegheny street.

—John Emerick badly crushed two of his fingers at the Swing factory Monday afternoon.

—Mrs. Hicks who has been in the Bellefonte hospital the past two weeks was discharged on Saturday.

—Five charming young ladies hoofed it from Red Roost to the Park on Thursday. Must have been good walking girls.

—Mrs. Harry E. Fenlon entertained at the Bush House Wednesday morning, in honor of Miss Carpenter, Mrs. Daggets guest.

—The Rankins, Cooks, Meyers, Wards, Blairs, Owayne, and Seiferts, spent Thursday at the Masons Camp near Curtin.

—A lad by the name of Miller fell from a tree near the Nittany Furnace on Friday evening and hurt his back very badly.

—Mr. Harry Hazel, of Niagara Falls has typhoid fever. Mrs. Otto, Mrs Hazel's mother went up during the week to help take care of him.

—The wedding of Dr. J. Coburn Rogers and Miss Mary A. Conner of Hazelton has been announced to take place September 5 h 1907.

—Miss Anna Shortlidge and Mrs. John Walker entertained at their home Thursday in honor of Miss Mary Sterrett, of Titusville who is a guest of these ladies.

—Roy Gentzel who had a leg crushed in an auto accident some weeks ago, is improving nicely. It is thought that he can be removed to his home next week.

—William Long's barn, wagon shed and hog pen burned to the ground at Howard on Friday morning at 9:30 Mr. Long carried insurance on the barn and grain.

—Some sneak thieves were ramsacking Finkelstine's ice box one night this week, and if Finkie catches them at it again, he says the fellow won't sit down to eat for a while.

—Teddy Longwell the accommodating young clerk in Gettig's butcher shop took a day off on Wednesday and assisted his "pop" put an engine together at their home up Buffalo Run Valley.

—The Centre County Commissioners office will be closed on the 10-11-12 of September as Messrs Dunlap, Bailey and Weaver will attend the State Convention of county commissioners held at York, Pa.

—Hereafter when you don't give us your job work to print for your festivals, picnics and religious meetings don't ask us to put locals in the Daily advertising the affair. One good turn deserves another.

—When you live in a glass house don't throw any stones, in other words don't say unkind things about your friends for you cannot tell how soon some of your own family may be sailing in the same boat.

—On Friday Irvin Gray took "Sallie Derby" and "Marjoretta" to Brookville where he will enter them in the races next week. The horses were in charge of Kerin Gray a young fellow who knows how to look after a good race horse.

—There is a rumor afloat well founded this week to the effect that several business men have formed a partnership and will build a roller skating rink on Frazierr street, at State College. Bids have been asked for and the scheme seems to be a go.

—Miss Iva Meyers who was Historian in the graduating class at the Bellefonte High School last June was brought from her home in Milesburg on Friday evening and taken to the Bellefonte hospital suffering from an attack of appendicitis. We sincerely hope with Miss Meyer's many friends that she may speedily recover.

—An effort has been made to reach all the laboring people through the Unions and Orders by distribution of private invitations. Some may still not have been reached and this is to extend to them and all who work, a cordial invitation to attend the Presbyterian church on Sunday and hear Dr. J. Allison Platts preach his wonderful Labor Sermon. His text will be "The Hope of Better Things."

—If you want to see something new just go around to James Schofield's harness establishment on Spring street and see his charming young female harness maker. She is certainly a stunner and is making quite a success at the trade. This is a new venture for a young lady, but they can prove to the world that they are just as competent as men at most any kind of work. Go around and see her at work and we know you will buy a set of harness.

—Corporal Jake Johnson one of the best little buglers in the state and a member of the 5th Regt Bugle Corps sounded taps at the Merkle funeral on Tuesday.

—Col. J. L. Spangler of this place has been appointed a member of the notification committee which will officially notify John G. Harman of his nomination for State Treasurer on the Democratic ticket. The notification will be made at Mr. Harman's home in Bloomsburg on Wednesday, September 11th.

—Miss May Walker one of the young lady operators in the Commercial exchange has been quite seriously ill with appendicitis but through the careful nursing of friends and the splendid treatment from her physician Dr. Philip Fisher, she is almost well. She makes her home with Mr. and Mrs. Witmer Smith on High street.

—On Wednesday evening Gettig and Lyon received a car load of fine young cattle bought at the Lewisburg market. They arrived on the Lewisburg freight and about a half an hour after they got to the stables three of them were slaughtered. The demand for good tender beefsteak is wonderful in Bellefonte, and our butchers generally have a good supply on hand.

—The Women's Christian Temperance Union convention will be held Monday and Tuesday September 9th and 10th at Philipsburg, Mrs Olive Pond Amies of Philadelphia will be the evening speaker. A large delegation of the "White Ribboners" will take charge of our little "Mountain City," and great good is expected to be the result of this convention. They should come to Bellefonte once and awhile.

—Nora wife of James Hubler died at their home near Penn Hall on Monday a 7 o'clock after an illness of two weeks of pulmonary trouble. She was a model wife and a good mother and her place cannot be filled. She was 32 years old and a daughter of Daniel H. and Hannah Osman, who survives her, also her husband and one dear little girl and three sisters and one brother. She was a devout christian woman and a member of the Lutheran Church. Burial made at Pine Hall by the pastor Rev. R. H. Burgstresser.

—When Mrs. Margaret Howell Jefferson Davis Hayes, of Colorado Springs, Col., daughter of the President of the Confederacy, learned that a member of the fighting Fifteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry, attending the reunion in Colorado Springs, had hung upon the walls of the Antlers hotel a copy of the old proclamation offering a reward of $360,000 for the arrest of her father and other Confederate leaders for alleged complicity in the assassination of President Lincoln, she immediately raised a protest to General William J. Palmer, the host of the reunion. Before her protest had been received, however, General Palmer had heard of the proclamation and ordered that it be taken down out of the deference to Mrs. Hayes, who is the wife of J. A. Hayes, a banker and prominent in Colorado Springs society.

Dr. Waldo C. VanValin.

Dr. Waldo C. Van Valin, late of Unionville, Pa., died at Colville, Wash., Saturday, August 24, of a paralytic stroke. He was aged 68 years. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Jennie A. VanValin, to whom he was married at Unionville 37 years ago, and the following children: Forrest, Ralph, Arthur, Raymond and Oliver at home, and Clyde, of Unionville. His surviving brothers and sisters are: Frank, of New Jersey; Oliver, of Johnsonburg, Pa., James of Kansas, Willard, of Jeannett, Pa., and Mrs. Clara F. Elder, of Tyrone. He was the son of J. W. and Sarah VanValin, both deceased. He had been ill since July last. The funeral occurred at Colville Tuesday.

What Tyrone Thinks of Twitmyer.

Thank, Bellefonte, thanks! The native place of John Montgomery Ward has given us another star.

Twitmire and Porte, the new battery secured from Elmira, were in the points for Tyrone and showed up very well. In fact "Twit" was the supreme feature of the day, for his batting was most serious. He hit for three bases twice, and one of his long three-baggers was sprung when three Tyrone young men were distributed upon the bases. All got homesick immediately, took the running treatment and were cured.

The Academy.

The Bellefonte Academy opens its fall term on Wednesday Sept. 11th at 1:30 p. m. It is desirable that all prospective pupils report promptly. The primaries ought to enjoy their school life this year housed as they will be in those most comfortable and homelike quarters provided in the house at the corner of Bishop and Spring street. The location is a very desirable one with no hills to climb and plenty of play-ground for all.

Headache and constipation disappear when Rings Little Liver Pills are used. They keep the system clean, the stomach sweet. Taken occasionally they keep you well. They are for the entire family. Sold by Krumrines.

THE EXPERIENCE OF MANY WOMEN

Demonstrate Beyond All Cavil That Pe-ru-na Is a Safe and Useful Household Remedy.

Read What the Women Say.

Chronic Hoarseness.

Mrs. Delia C. Cameron, Healdsburg, Cal., member Daughters of America, writes:

"Having tried many remedies for chronic catarrh of the bronchial tubes, and not receiving any benefit, I began to think there was no help for me until I began to use Peruna.

"In a short time the bronchial tubes began to clear, I did not have that 'frog in my throat' continually, my voice was not nearly so husky, and the wheezing noise disappeared.

"I was soon able to believe that I was entirely free from catarrh, and as this was several months ago, I do not believe that it will return."

The above group of women could be multiplied by ten thousand without reaching the number that have been helped by taking Peruna.

Catarrh of the Stomach.

Miss Emily Koch, 914 Michigan Ave., Sheboygan, Wis., writes:

"I can heartily recommend Peruna for catarrh of the stomach. I had tried many things which did me no good and as a last resort I got a bottle of Peruna.

"I only regret that I did not try it before I forced so much bad stuff into my stomach. It has entirely cured me and as a preventative I always keep a bottle in the house.

"I gladly recommend it to all who are afflicted as I was."

A Wasting Disease.

Mrs. Roxa Tyler, 6210 Madison Avenue, Chicago, Ill., Vice President of the Illinois Woman's Alliance, writes:

"During the past year I gradually lost flesh and strength until I was unable to perform my work properly. I tried different remedies, and finally Peruna was suggested to me.

"It gave me new life and restored my strength. I cannot speak too highly of it."

Bronchial Catarrh.

Mrs. Wm. Hohmann, 569 N. Paulina St., Chicago, Ill., writes:

"I suffered with catarrh of the bronchial tubes and had a terrible cough ever since a child. When a child it was supposed to be whooping cough or the croup, but as I got older it got worse.

"After a while it got so bad I had to cough both winter and summer. Finally I burst a blood vessel in my throat from the strain of coughing, next a blood vessel in my stomach, so I kept getting worse and doctoring, and even then could get no relief.

"I went to a dispensary for treatment, but it all done me no good. At night I could never lie on my back. I would sit up until two or three o'clock in the morning before I could close my eyes. Then of course, I thought, and everybody else that I had consumption.

"Reading the papers about Peruna I decided to try it without the least hope that it would do me any good. But after taking three bottles I noticed a change. My appetite got better, so I kept on, never got discouraged.

"Now I can lie on my back and sleep all night, and you may well think how thankful I am for Peruna."

The Country Store.

In former years it was better known than now, and better appreciated. It was much of the life of every rural hamlet and district. It was and to a certain extent is yet the best school for every countryman who reached the age of maturity. Our common schools and academies and colleges teach nothing as to government, and if they do, it but reaches minds too young to comprehend. It is the conflict of mind which teaches government and upon the counter and around the stove of the country store it is best taught. There is always some one there who is in contact with public men and public documents, who is posted or gives out his knowledge; it is questioned by bright but generous minds, and the truth is reached at last. This leads others to imitate the best reformed man, and the result is the education of all the surroundings of the country store in the art of government. The boys are there ready to walk or ride home with their fathers or uncles after a well spent evening. They thus acquire an ambition not dreamed of in any school, and as they grow older they apply it and become certainly useful citizens, and frequently men of distinction.

Daniel Webster extrolled the country store as the best school known to New England. There he learned to think, and these thoughts led to the finest language known in our history, and to the most patriotic. Clay gathered his greatness, not in forums but at the country store. So did Harry Wilson, the cobbler of Massachusetts. Alexander Stevens of Georgia loved the country store, visited all in his state, there learned the many idioms peculiar to the South, and this knowledge was the foundation of his great good sense and his masterful popularity. Lincoln got his first inspiration in the country store and when he rode his lawyer's circuits these were his favorite stopping places, and here he would swap his quaint stories with those from the counter. All of our early rural great men were indebted to the country store, first for information, next for political support.

It is a pity that the power of the country store was ever impaired. It was the best educator, and is yet. You learn nothing of government and its practical application in the Churches, nothing whatever. The minister who touches upon, puts his foot in it because his education has been upon wholly different lines. The constitution learned by minds too youthful in the schools are comprehended only by contact and discussion with more mature and broader minds. The colleges are mainly given to other subjects. Schools and colleges aid but do not ripen.

Half a century ago the country store was to its community the best lyceum. It is yet in rural districts far removed from great cities, and we trust its power may return to all of the counties of Pennsylvania. That great power was first assailed by Local Option legislation passed in 1870. Many of the rural districts voted for Local Option: none of the cities. What was the result? Men who saw in this drastic legislation an infringement of their personal liberty, transferred their custom from country and hamlet to the cities. There they could buy all the whisky needed, and cover it in baskets filled with groceries and dry goods.

This was a blow to every country store. It led to lessened receipts, to corresponding loss of stock and supplies. Prior to 1870 everything was kept in the country store, from pins to silks, from pills to paregoric. The demand for dry goods ceased, as it did for many things. The Local Option of 1870, the same as that proposed last year was repealed by an indignant people after three years and the country store did its part in the repeal. There were few taverns or breweries to aid.

Now invention comes to the aid of the country store and the old-fashioned country inn, an institution, which was really a public benefit. The automobile is more than a fad; it has come to stay. It seeks the country road side and patronizes the country store and the country inn. It traverses great distances.

Pennsylvania's best days were when the country store flourished, as Englands best days and best men were contemporaneous with the wayside inn.

A blow against the country store was attempted in the Pennsylvania Legislature in 1903. The Bureau of Pharmacy, which had taxed for its own use all druggists, tried to subject the country store to examination and fees. Cooper, of Deleware County attacked the Bill in a ten minute speech filled with exposures, and after a winter's lobbying it was defeated by a vote of 182 to 12. This proved the death of Bureau fees. Cooper represented the Country store. Other men will rise to repeal mercantile taxes and foster an institution which should never die. "H."

A childless home is a cheerless home. The maternal instinct exists in every woman, and when it is ungratified she is deprived of much of the happiness of life. It often happens that childlessness is due to some cause which can be removed, and often is removed by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The vigor and vitality which this remedy imparts to the delicate womanly organs, puts them in a condition of normal health, the lack of which is often the sole obstruction to maternity. Every woman should read Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, a book containing 1008 pages and 700 illustrations. It is sent entirely free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the paper bound volum, or 31 stamps for cloth covered. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

Milesburg vs. Unionville.

The game of ball that was played at the "Graveyard" park on Tuesday between Milesburg and Unionville was a dandy from start to finish. The game was called on account of the "Up the Valley" boys having to go home on the evening trains, the score was 9-9 at the close of the 9th inn. Fully 300 hundred people were out to see this little battle that was one of the most exciting ever played in the burg.

"Skinny" Miles was right there with the goods at ss and when a fly went within five feet of him he would stretch out those great long lunch hooks of his and make a sandwich out of it. Skinny is alright and will tackle anything coming his way.

Perhaps the most sensational batting on the Milesburg team was done by Metz the little mixoligist at Kollie's. He is an all around player and did some most excellent backing up.

"Jinks" Johnson did some stunning grand stunts out on 2nd base and when ever he got a fair show the victims never went by him. He is captain of the "Burgers" and is right at home in this position as he knows the game and knows where to place his men.

"Ret" Thomas one of those big tall lanky fellows was all to the mustard when it come down to immitating Rube Waddle, in fact he struck so many men out that the score keeper lost track of them. He is certainly a twirler and is right there with all kinds of curves.

"Fatty" Mills was like a stone wall over on 1st base and deserves lots of credit for his good playing.

"Christmas" Jodon stood back of the bat, and someone must have wagered that he would fumble, for he had his mettle up and caught everything handed his way.

"Sing Sing Sid" Estrict away out in right field could hardly be seen, and had it not been for the sun striking the bald spot on top of his head you wouldn't have known he was there, but he did his share in handing the Unionville boys the lemon.

Housel the little plumber played on 3rd base and was right there with the goods in his all around playing he supported the pitcher and did some good batting.

"Kinz Brady" Jodon of Company B. fame with his first nights experience in camp was out in left field and whenever anything came within fifty yards of him he had it.

"Spotty" Johnson was the empire of the game and a better man could not have been gotten for the job. He dealt fair and square with both teams.

The Milesburg team have a strong team and throw out a challenge to anything along the line.

TO TALK WELL.

Don't Affect a Stilted Style of Conversation.

Don't speak in a low, monotonous voice. Conversation is like a song. It needs pronounced accent and a great variety of intonations to keep up a sustained interest.

Don't tell long stories of personal experiences. One who has the habit of making personal recitals takes the lion's share of the conversation and doesn't give the listener a fair chance.

Don't ask trifling questions. Don't air your prejudices. Neither contributes to the grace of conversational art, the essence of which should be sympathy.

Don't talk of melancholy or grewsome matters. Give the talk a happy turn. Don't ride conversation too hard. Leave breathing spaces in the talk. It is not essential that every moment two people are together should be filled with a flow of words.

Don't deaden and hinder the conversation by being too accurate over details. Don't go back and add appendices to a subject after you have once left it. If the subject was not closed to your satisfaction, no matter.

Don't run one story into another. When you have told a good story stop short in order that its effect may tell. A good story should be set off by a blank or dull space in the talk.

Don't make a point of agreeing with every speaker. The real zest of conversation lies in just enough difference of opinion to bring out the strong points of two people's character. There is nothing more genial than the warmth of friendly discussion which never rises to anger.

Don't harp too long on one string. Change to another topic before the one in hand is quite thrashed out. To turn the conversation gracefully is like reversing in the waltz, a nice point of skill.

Don't affect a stilted style of conversation. The longest words are by no means the best words. Everyday idioms and colloquialisms have a directness and terseness that commend themselves to the really good talker.

JACK LONDON'S RECIPE.

Wild Duck Cooked In This Way Is "Sovereign Food."

Jack London, the novelist, is a great lover of game, particularly of wild duck, which he has dubbed the "sovereign food." If he is to eat duck, however, Mr. London insists that the bird shall be cooked after his own particular recipe. Thus if the wild duck is to be roasted it must first be stuffed with celery and then cooked in a very hot oven for just fourteen minutes. This leaves it blood rare, but when it is dusted with salt and paprika, garnished with lemon and served with fried hominy or Italian spaghetti there are few dishes that could be more delicious. There are so many methods of cooking spaghetti that Mr. London's favorite recipe for this dish will be read with interest. "Boil one pound of Italian spaghetti for about half an hour," he says, "and be sure that the boiling water is first poured upon the spaghetti, as otherwise it will be disagreeably sticky. Peel and boil three good sized tomatoes. When they are smooth add the juice from one can of French mushrooms and one tablespoonful of cornstarch, already mixed with a little water, a clove of garlic, a pinch of cayenne pepper, a little salt and sage as seasoning. Take the mushrooms from which the juice has already been used, cut each of them once or twice and spread the pieces cold over the spaghetti after it has been placed upon a hot platter. Then pour the tomato sauce over the spaghetti and mushrooms, add a little Parmesan cheese and garnish with parsley."—Delineator.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

A little charcoal mixed with clear water and thrown into a sink will disinfect and deodorize it.

A tablespoonful of sirup of lactophosphate of lime just before each meal will be found very helpful if the teeth are soft and brittle. Plenty of whole wheat bread is also very beneficial. When brushing the teeth always brush away from the gums.

When using hot flannel applications in case of pain or illness it is well to heat the clothes in the covered steamer placed over boiling water. They will not have to be wrung out of the boiling water, and there will be no dripping on the patient's clothing.

The teeth should be thoroughly brushed and cleansed night and morning with a firm brush and an antiseptic mouth wash used. Particles of foreign substance may be removed with dental floss. This is the only possible way of keeping the teeth in a good condition.

Accidental.

Alice—How did you come to meet your second husband, Grace? Grace—It was purely accidental. He ran over my first one with a motor car and afterward attended the funeral.

A Crash.

"John, what was that awful noise in the bathroom just now?"

"Don't worry, my dear," replied John sleepily. "It was merely a crash towel falling."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Opinion.

Opinion is a light, vain, crude and imperfect thing settled in the imagination, but never arriving at the understanding, there to obtain the tincture of reason.—Ben Jonson.

BLUEBEARD.

Two Different Stories as to Who Was the Original.

Like many of the other heroes of the nursery tales, Bluebeard once lived in the flesh and blood, if the old chronicler Holinshed, from whom Shakespeare got so much of his material, is to be believed. According to that writer, the original Bluebeard was Giles de Retz or de Raiz, marquis of Laval, who became marshal of France in 1429. He is described as an impious and debauched man, a devotee of the black art, who enticed young men and women to his castle and killed them in order to obtain innocent blood for his magical enchantments and who also murdered six or seven of his wives. His crimes were discovered, and he was burned at the stake in 1440 at Nantes.

According to an old French legend, however, the original Bluebeard lived in Britanny in the sixth century and was known as Count Conomer. After seven of his wives had disappeared he became enamored of Triphyna, the daughter of Count Guereck of Vannes. The wedding was celebrated at Vannes, and Conomer took his bride home.

Before a year had passed Triphyna noticed a change in her husband's manner, and, fearing the same fate that had met her predecessors, she fled from the castle, but was overtaken by Conomer, who struck off her head with a single blow. St. Gildas, by whom the unfortunate wife had been educated, happened to pass the spot soon after, and, seeing the body, he tenderly replaced the head and by prayer restored Triphyna to life. The story does not relate the end of Conomer.

A Chair Hospital.

Quite the newest thing in the way of an occupation for women is putting cane seats in chairs.

A Boston woman has chosen this unique way of earning money and is making a decided success of it. She has secured a clientele among well known families, and every patron she serves brings several others, so that her "chair hospital," as she calls her workshop, is seldom without a large number of patients. She averages 60 or 70 cents on each chair and can cane five or six a day.

Seven Moons In One Night.

It is said that at Sonoma, Cal., the full moon rises and sets seven times in one night. The Indians call the place Sonoma valley, which means the "valley of many moons." The explanation is that there is a certain peak east of the town toward which you have to look to see the queer phenomenon, the mountain being so formed there that the moon rises into sight and sinks out of it seven times in succession.

5547 INHABITANTS IN BELLEFONTE.

Cencus Taken by D. Paul Fortney, Esq.

The Council meeting was held on Monday evening and all the bills were approved and ordered paid. D. Paul Fortney who had been appointed by Burgess Curtin to take a cencus of Bellefonte reported to the council that the work had been carefully done and according to his figures we have 5547 inhabitants in Bellefonte. Mr. Fortney's appointment was approved by the council. The purpose for having this cencus taken at this time was, the Elks are desirous of organizing a lodge in Bellefonte and the town in which this order is organized must have a certain number of people residing there in.

The council authorized the street committee to go ahead and buy the pipe for the sewers to be laid on Bishop, Howard and Allegheny streets.

Rev Barry's Uncle.

Thursday the body of Charles C. Mason passed through Bellefonte from Hartleton to Altoona where services were held in the Fourth Lutheran church in that city.

Mr. Mason was a brother to Mrs. Barry the mother of Rev. Barry of Bellefonte. He died very suddenly at Hartleton on Tuesday of paralisis. Rev. Barry and his parents accompanied the body to Altoona where the interment were made.

Consigned to the Tomb.

Friday morning the body of the late James Emerick was brought to Bellefonte from Altoona and taken to the Union cemetery for interment. Rev. J. Allison Platts conducted the services at the grave The casket bearers were Messrs. John Love, Albert Schad, Thomas Fleming and Wilbur Baney. A great many friends of the deceased from Altoona attended the funeral.

The Wallace Brick Yard.

We hear so much talk about the Orvis brick yard, Howard, Mill Hall and DuBois brick works, but hardly ever do we hear people saying much about the Wallace Brick Works.

We have one of the finest plants that can be found in Pennsylvania, right down at Milesburg, and they are doing a dandy good business. Of course the entire plant is under the control of Mr. Frank Wallace while his son Bruce Wallace is in charge and really manages the business.

They keep five kilns in operation all the time and the output from this number of kilns is 20,000 brick a day. The clay is found right on the Wallace farm while the shale is dug out of Moose Run. No matter when you pass by this plant you can always see from two to four cars waiting to be loaded with brick, which goes to show that they have an open market for all they can manufacture.

Besides manufacturing the brick, the Wallace family do about all the building that is done in the brick work around Bellefonte and Centre county. Everyone of the boys are expert brick layers and very rapid, it is said that one of the Wallace boys can throw up more brick in a day than any two brick layers in Bellefonte. Their work is always done in a neat tidy way and gives the best satisfaction. When out working on contracts they leave behind at the kilns a competent corps of men who understand the process of making the brick. They are Ed McKinley Dave Wieland, firemen; Loch Rager, fireman of the dryer; Mr. Chew, of Pittsburg, foreman of the burning of the brick; Frank Wallace, brick setter; Austin Watson, at the cut off; R. C. Kellerman and J. C. Rager are the catchers, and Charley Sheckler has charge of the work on the transfer. The plant works steady and gives employment to these men nearly the entire year.

We feel like encouraging an industry of this kind, as it has been one of the old stand bys to old Centre county for many years past. The brick they make are just as good if not better than you can purchase else where, only the Wallace boys sell their product cheaper.

COURT PROCLAMATION—Whereas the Honorable Ellis L. Orvis, President Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of the 49th Judicial District, consisting of the county of Centre, having issued his precept, bearing date the 26th, day of July, 1907, to me directed for holding a Court of Common Pleas, Orphans' Court, Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery, in Bellefonte, for the County of Centre and to commence on the

For the Children

To succeed these days you must have plenty of grit, courage, strength. How is it with the children? Are they thin, pale, delicate? Do not forget Ayer's Sarsaparilla. You know it makes the blood pure and rich, and builds up the general health in every way.

The children cannot possibly have good health unless the bowels are in proper condition. A sluggish liver gives a coated tongue, bad breath, constipated bowels. Correct all these by giving small laxative doses of Ayer's Pills. All vegetable, sugar-coated.

A Kind Examiner.

Sir John Stainer was dearly loved by the students when he was professor of music at Oxford. "As an examiner he was most considerate," said one who studied under him, "and would always do his best to get you 'through.' I remember his asking me a poser in a viva voce examination. He waited patiently for the answer; but, partly through my nervousness no doubt, I could not think of it. At length he exclaimed testily, 'Dear me, how stuffy this room is, to be sure,' and he went and began tugging at the ventilator cord. It was quite two minutes before he got the thing open, and by the time he had sat down again and rearranged his gown I had the answer ready. Comparing notes later in the day with a man who was examined quite soon after me, I told him how the ventilator had served me. 'How remarkable,' he replied. 'Why, when I was stuck he said, "How extraordinary drafty this place is," and spent quite two minutes in shutting the ventilator.'"—Manchester Guardian.

The Razor In Disrepute.

"And he told her all his heart, and said unto her, there hath not come a razor upon mine head, for I have been a Nazarite unto God from my mother's womb; if I be shaven, then my strength will go from me, and I shall become weak and be like other men."—Judges xvi, 17.

Hair on man or brute is a sign of strength. He who desires to keep at a safe distance from dentists, let him keep also at a great distance from the knife of the barber. To shave is an act against nature. Provoke nature, and in return nature will provoke you.

Said Daniel Webster: "—— the razor! It has taught me to curse. It has cost me more time and more trouble than all my speeches."

Rufus Choate, the lawyer, called the razor an instrument invented by Lucifer to fill up hell with barristers.

Edward Everett never used profane language, but before shaving he would invariably give vent to all sorts of French barbarisms.

Jordan Water.

There is a general impression that the Jordan water which is used at royal baptisms is taken from the sacred stream, put into a bottle, hermetically sealed and left untouched until the bottle is opened by the officiating priest. As a matter of fact, the water which flows out of the lake of Galilee and descends a rocky gorge to a level far below that of the Mediterranean is full of organic substances. If a bottle be filled with the water and kept tightly corked for a few days it turns perfectly black and offers to the nostrils all the odors of the tropics. The precaution is therefore taken of boiling the water and straining it before it is sealed up, and this is why the baptismal water always possesses the crystal clearness which one notices on these ceremonial occasions.—Modern Society.

The Undertaker's Shop.

"The one thing in New York that I can't get used to," said the country visitor, "is the manifold uses to which undertakers put their shops. I used to be of the opinion that the only possible errand a person could have at an undertaker's was to purchase funeral supplies, but in this town I find that people go there for all sorts of purposes. They go to vote, to get married and to transact all the legal business that a notary public is capable of transacting. Yesterday I even saw a party eating luncheon in an undertaker's establishment. They had come into town apparently to attend a funeral and instead of patronizing a restaurant they calmly munched their midday meal in the midst of those lugubrious surroundings."—New York Globe.

Her Very Good Reason.

The two wives were discussing the pecuniary peculiarities of their respective husbands, and they coincided with great unanimity until they reached the point of their own relation to the purse strings.

"My husband never gives me a penny unless he growls about my extravagance," said one.

"Mine does the same thing," attested the other.

"But I get even with him." And her face showed the color of satisfaction.

"How do you ever do it?"

"I go through his trousers pockets when he's asleep."

"Goodness gracious!" exclaimed the other. "I wouldn't do that for anything."

"Why not? Haven't we a right to the money as well as they have?"

"Yes, but I wouldn't go through my husband's trousers pockets for it."

"I'd like to know why?" said the first, quite indignant at the apparent reproof.

"Because," blushed the other, "he carries his money in his waistcoat pocket."—Pearson's Weekly.

Why Scotland's Soil Is Thin.

An English golfer on a Scottish links hit the turf ten times for every once that he struck the ball. His caddie ventured on a sarcastic remonstrance.

"Ha' peety on auld Scotland, sir," said he. "She's suffered ower eneuch at the haunds o' yer countrymen in the past that ye sud treat her sae sair the day. Hit the ba', man, an' let the grun' alane."

"Confound Scotland!" shouted the exasperated golfer, flinging down his club in a rage. "It's just what Dr. Johnson described it—'stone, water and a little earth.'"

"Sae the docther said that, did he?" inquired the caddie.

"He did, and he was a very wise man, let me tell you," snapped the Englishman.

"I believe ye," retorted the caddie. "Nae doot the docther was a verra wise man, for there is muckle o' stane an' watter in Scotland—oor mountains an' lochs that ye come sae far tae see, an' it's a sair truth that the soil is no verra deep. Ye see, there's sic a hantle o' English bodies comes tae Scotland tae play gawf."—Glasgow Times.

Phases of the National Game.

There are two sides to almost anything, and the national game is far from being an exception. From the standpoint of the baseball enthusiast "our town has a club in the league." From the standpoint of the professional player the league has a club in each city. In the heart of the baseball patriot our club is a band of heroes, going out to conquer other cities and uphold our honor. In the mind of the man with soul so dead they are stock companies—properly financed. To the excited partisans at a game each player is an earnest contestant for his side. To the man who is from foreign parts it would be an important fact that they are hired men, employees with salaries set by companies that all belong to the same corporation, and that they get their pay for playing and not for winning. To the president of the company it may be a good or bad "performance."—Century.

Books Written In Jail.

Jail seems to be a good place in which to write books. Literary men surpass themselves there. John Bunyan wrote "Pilgrim's Progress" in jail. Cervantes wrote "Dox Quixote" in prison. Defoe laid the plans for "Robinson Crusoe" during a term of confinement imposed on him for the writing of a pamphlet called "The Shortest Way With the Dissenters." Leigh Hunt wrote "Rimini" in jail. Sir Walter Raleigh during his fourteen years' imprisonment in the Tower of London wrote his excellent "History of the World." Silvio Pellico and Tasso both did their best work in jail.

Food and Digestion.

One of the biggest mistakes about food which people make is to forget that the true value of food to anybody is the measure of its digestibility. Half a pound of cheese is vastly more nourishing, as regards its mere composition, than half a pound of beef; but while the beef will be easily digested, and thus be of vast service to us, the cheese is put out of court altogether for ordinary folks by reason of its indigestibility. We should bear this rule in mind when we hear people comparing one food with another in respect of their chemical value.

A Careful Official.

"Some years ago," remarked a physician, "when the people in the south feared that an epidemic of yellow fever would spread from Cuba to this country the health board officer of a certain southern city was so careful to keep out the infection that he gave orders to disinfect all telegrams received from Havana."

One Sided Talk.

He—Wasn't there some talk about Maud marrying a duke? She—There was, but unfortunately the duke did none of the talking.

A Cause For Thanks.

Charles O'Conor once began an after dinner speech in Philadelphia in this way:

"I must confess that I dread to make after dinner speeches. At the most sumptuous dinners, even at such a dinner as this one, if I know that at the end I must make a speech I am nervous. I have no appetite, I find little to admire in the best efforts of the chef. In truth, gentlemen, I can readily imagine Daniel in the lion's den was at all of my mind, heaving a sigh of relief as the lions drew near to devour him—heaving a sigh of relief and murmuring:

"'Well, if there's any after dinner speaking to be done on this occasion, at least it won't be done by me.'"

GIVING OF SMALL DINNERS.

The Secret of Success Where Finances Are Somewhat Limited.

Because one may not spend many dollars on the giving of dinners, that is no reason why one may not have them. It needs only a prettily arranged table, a congenial and carefully selected group of six or eight guests and a hostess in a pretty pale frock to achieve an atmosphere that cannot be outdone, except in the matter of money spent, by the hostess who has a menage of sorts with a butler to serve and three or four maids to help take off one's wraps.

The first principle for the hostess with one maid who aspires to a dinner is to be tremendously careful not to attempt the impossible. Just the fact of giving the dinner is bound to mean a lot of work for her, but that will be part of her joy in the occasion. The menu ought to be simple and of things that she knows her cook can achieve, and the salad, the dessert and all the arrangements must be done by herself if they are to be at all elaborate.

An oyster or a fruit cocktail, to begin with, is an inexpensive dish and one that will give a simple meal a "party-like" air that will start it right. A pineapple cocktail, for instance, may be made from canned fruit. The fruit is shredded quite fine; then to it are added three sherry glasses of curacoa and the juice of three lemons. Use enough sugar to sweeten and a gill of good brandy and a few cherries or white grapes. Place at each plate a tall glass of this on a small doily.

There need be no worry over the clear soup, for every cook can make that, only be sure it is hot. Then the fish may be in ramekins or large artificial shells and of halibut with bits of lobster, and this, too, loses its goodness if not hot. With the roast there need be but one vegetable, and that a hot macaroni dish or chestnuts creamed or tiny carrots in a cream sauce; always potatoes in some form, those beaten up and seasoned and put back into their half shells with a top dressing of whipped egg being nice.

The salad, the next course, should be, above all, very cold and the plates equally so. Haven't you dined in houses where the plates were sadly limited and the cook had hastily washed some that had been used before and that were still hot? That is one of the small tragedies that the hostess of small allowance must guard against thrusting upon the notice of her guests.

A skinned tomato stuffed with a delicious concoction of chopped up nuts and apple, with a delicious dab of mayonnaise dressing flowing over it, with a crisp lettuce leaf beneath, will make a splash of color that looks most refreshing after the hot dishes. One serves tiny toasted and cheesed biscuits with this, with cream, Camembert or Brie cheese.

And then the dessert may be as elaborate as one dares attempt. About the simplest and yet most elaborate looking sweet there is is made by filling tall stemmed glasses with a vanilla ice into which you have chopped walnuts and wee bits of pineapple or cherry and on which is poured a hot chocolate sauce.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Discarded dimity skirts make very attractive bureau scarfs. They may be bleached white, if necessary, and then conventional designs worked on them with floss or cut out cretonne designs appliqued on.

When ants are troublesome sprinkle sugar through a small piece of sponge and leave these about the pantry shelves. In a short time the ants will be holding a high carnival. Plunge the sponges in boiling water and set again.

A good remedy for keeping moths out of furs and woolen pieces is to wrap the fur tightly in a piece of newspaper that has been soaked in turpentine. Place in an old pillowcase or bag. There is absolutely no danger that the moths will disturb any piece so treated.

$1,000,000 Industrial School for State

Congressman Focht of Union county in an address at Hummel reunion said in a recent conversation with C. M. Schwab in New York city, the steel king had told him that he was arranging plans to build an industrial school to cost at least $1 000,000 for State College, the object of the school being to have it also provided that young men could learn any of the trades and be able to skillfully work at the same upon graduation. This will be the second benefaction bestowed upon State College by Mr. Schwab, a building having been donated to that institution in the name of Mrs. Schwab.

Town Growing on Lake Bed

Through the bed of what was once the South Fork Lake, of Johnstown flood history, one of the largest bodies of water in the state, two or three railroad tracks run. The summer cottages are gone, the guests at the club are gone; the cottages are occupied by workmen; the club is in the hands of artisians. A mine is being sunk in the lake which brought death to 3000 persons and caused millions of dollars' damage the afternoon of May 31, 1889. And the town which is springing up about the new mine is St. Michael. If the old Conemaugh lake still existed the town site would be 20 to 60 feet under water. By the last of this week St. Michael will be a flag stop on the Dunlo Branch railroad, and within six months it will be a regular stop. In 18 months, the optimists say there will be population of 5000.

The Money Making Game.

The first of all English games is making money. That is an all absorbing game, and we knock each other down oftener in playing at that than at football or any other rougher sport, and it is absolutely without purpose. No one who engages heartily in that game ever knows why. Ask a great money maker what he wants to do with his money—he never knows. He doesn't make it to do anything with it. He gets it only that he may get it. "What will you make of what you have got?" you ask. "Well, I'll get more," he says, just as at cricket you get more runs. There's no use in the runs, but to get more of them than other people is the game, and there's no use in the money, but to have more of it than other people is the game. So all that great foul city of London there—rattling, growling, smoking, stinking—a ghastly heap of fermenting brickwork, pouring out poison at every pore—you fancy it is a city of work? Not a street of it! It is a great city of play—very nasty play and very hard play, but still play. It is only Lord's cricket ground without the turf—a huge billiard table without the cloth and with pockets as deep as the bottomless pit, but mainly a billiard table after all.—John Ruskin.

RICHARD MANSFIELD

The Great Actor Succumbs to Disease After Long Illness

WAS NOT AN OLD MAN

Was Born May 24, 1857, and as a Youth was Sent to England—To be Buried at Seven Acres.

HIS FAMILY PRESENT AT HIS DEATH

New London, Conn., August 30.—Richard Mansfield, the best known actor on the American stage, passed away Friday morning at his summer residence, Seven Acre, Ocean avenue. Death was directly due to disease of the liver, aggravated by complications.

Dr. A. H. Allen, a local physician, who has been in charge since Mr. Mansfield's arrival here from Saranac Lake, states that death was not greatly unexpected, although this fact had not been made public, Mr. Mansfield's condition had been reported as being excellent. It was stated that he stood the journey well from Saranac Lake and that he was up and around his home until three days ago. Then a turn for the worse set in and Mr. Mansfield was confined to his room.

On Thursday Dr. McClellan, of Pittsburg, was summoned. Dr. Allen said Friday that he had feared the worst for several days. There were quite a number of conditions that prevented his getting well.

During the great actor's last moments he was lying in a condition of coma and did not recognize the loved ones at his bedside. There were present at the time of his death his wife, his brother Felix, his young son Gibbe, and the physicians and nurses.

Directly opposite Seven Acres, the late home of Richard Mansfield who died at half past six o'clock Friday morning, is a small burial plot in which are buried members of the Gardner family, from whom Mansfield had purchased his summer home. Within this little God's acre the great actor's body will rest. This is at his request, made on his death bed, surrounded by his family. The funeral will be held Monday, from his late residence. Rev. Alfred Poolegrist, D. D. rector of St. James Protestant Episcopal church will officiate.

The district committee will meet at Sunbury on Thursday next, to plan for the district convention, which will be held at Berwick, October 4 to 6th.

Lively tennis contests are being played off every day.

Rankin and Gray defeated Wetzel and Platts, on Thursday is a senior contest, and the Keller brothers defeated Olewine and Joseph in an intermediate contest on Wednesday.

Interesting plans for the fall work are being outlined, so everything will be moving indoors soon.

The directors several week ago extended an invitation to Ernest Mileham, of Rochester, N. Y., to succeed Mr. Godfry as physical director. Mr. Mileham found it impossible for him to come to Bellefonte, so correspondence has been had recently with men in Baltimore, Germantown, Scranton, Poughkeepsie and Toledo. It seems possible that arrangements will be made with the Scranton man, within a few days. President Shuey announces the following as chairmen of committees: Finance, J. R. Hughes; Devotional, C. K. Hickler; Educational, J. E. Wagner; Physical, John Bullock; Boy's Work, H. J. Hartranft; membership, Edward Gates; Auxiliary, Mrs. C. N. Meserve.

The association regretfully informs its young gentlemen visitors, that on account of the persistant ill conduct of street fellows, the porch seat has been removed and the rule "No Loitering on This Porch" must be strictly enforced on good and bad alike.

Cough Caution

Never, positively never poison your lungs. If you cough—even from a simple cold only—you should always heal, soothe, and ease the irritated bronchial tubes. Don't blindly suppress it with a stupefying poison. It's strange how some things finally come about. For twenty years Dr. Shoop has constantly warned people not to take cough mixtures or prescriptions containing Opium, Chloroform, or similar poisons. And now—a little late though—Congress says "Put it on the label, if poisons are in your Cough Mixture." Good! Very good!! Hereafter for this very reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance then, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and note the difference. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding

The Empire of Abdul Aziz.

THE empire of Morocco, which has been the scene of exciting events recently, is one of the worst governed countries in the world. It has become accustomed to turbulent scenes, for fighting of some kind has been going on within its borders most of the time for over 2,000 years. In the person of Sultan Abdul Aziz IV. Morocco has a ruler who is supposed to possess absolute powers, but in reality he controls but a part of the population of his realm. The wild tribesmen under their different chiefs are in continual insurrection, and the present troubles are due to unusual activity on the part of these unruly subjects. In consequence of the barbarous character of these tribesmen travel into the interior of Morocco has been attended with danger and is seldom undertaken by Europeans. Even his shereefian majesty Abdul Aziz, Emir el Mumenin, or lord of the true believers, is not safe from molestation within his domains. He has been accustomed to make a wide detour in the past when traveling between Marrakesh and Fez, his capitals, in order to avoid being set upon and murdered by those who are supposed to yield him loyal allegiance and hold his person in sacred regard. The principal wild tribes are the Riffians and the Berbers, the latter the descendants, as supposed, of the race that inhabited the country in the earliest historical times. The Riffians are notorious brigands and pirates, who never hesitate to cut the throats of any mariners or travelers unlucky enough to be cast upon their coast or to fall into their power. The Berbers of the interior are scarcely less ferocious.

In the towns and cities of Morocco conditions are not so very much better. The imperial revenues are derived from arbitrary imposts on imports and exports, from monopolies and from fines and confiscations. The sultan receives and disposes of everything uncontrolled. Every office is directly or indirectly purchased, small salaries or none at all are paid and public officers recoup themselves by plunder and oppression. All justice is bought and sold, and those who do not unhesitatingly submit to oppression may be thrown into dungeons and left to rot or be beaten and tortured. It has been said that the Morocco of today is more backward and in a worse condition of corruption and anarchy than the Morocco of 500 years ago.

And yet Morocco has many attractions. Its scenery is picturesque, and the climate of the coast regions is in many respects enjoyable, as a range of high mountains, covered in some parts with perpetual snow, intercepts the hot air from the desert so that refreshing sea breezes prevail throughout the year. The country is believed to have great mineral wealth, but it is as yet very little developed. Under stable and orderly government such as Egypt is now enjoying the natural resources of the country might be made to provide much wealth and prosperity for its inhabitants, and commerce with Europe and America would thrive. At present travelers in Morocco are chiefly interested in the numerous mosques, in the ancient walls with their curious and sometimes elaborate and artistic decorations and in the strange customs of the inhabitants. Morocco is a land of sloth and decadence, but its very backwardness contributes to its picturesqueness in the eyes of the discerning traveler who can witness in the life around him a replica of that one reads about in Genesis. Essentially the customs of the people have changed little in 3,000 years.

Fez, the holy city of Morocco, with its more than 300 mosques and its strange fanatical observances, is an interesting city to visit, but its Moslem inhabitants have a great prejudice against Europeans, who in consequence seldom gain admission within its gates. The latter are decorated in characteristically beautiful Moorish designs and also in a savage fashion, sometimes by the heads of criminals or of those slain in battle. It is probable that ere many more years have passed Morocco will yield to the influences of twentieth century civilization, and many of the barbarous and at the same time picturesque aspects it now possesses will pass away forever.

FIRST WIRELESS MESSAGE.

Colonel Clowry of the Western Union Claims to Have Sent It.

The strike of the telegraph operators has brought into prominence the president of the Western Union Telegraph company, Colonel Robert C. Clowry, who succeeded General Thomas T. Eckert in this position about five years ago. It may not be generally known that Colonel Clowry has some claim to being the first to use wireless telegraphy. Strange to say, his employment of it was as long ago as the period of the civil war. Born in 1839 in Will county, Ill., he entered the employ of the Illinois and Mississippi Telegraph company at Joliet in 1852 as messenger boy, and in the service of that and other companies acquired a thorough knowledge of the telegraphic science of the day. When the civil war broke out he went to the front in the Union army, and in 1863 President Lincoln commissioned him captain and assistant quartermaster of the United States army and assigned him to duty in charge of the United States telegraphic system in the southwest, with headquarters at Little Rock, Ark. Afterward he served at St. Louis.

At one time he found himself in command of the lines at a certain point in Missouri, but unable to communicate with the Union forces across the Mississippi owing to the fact that the enemy had cut the wires. The message he desired to transmit was of the utmost importance, says the Saturday Evening Post in relating the story, and could on no acount suffer delay. It was pitchy dark and the rain was descending in torrents, the wind was high and Colonel Clowry could conjure no way out of his difficulty. Suddenly he heard the toot of a locomotive on the other side of the river. An idea came to him. Only a short distance from him stood a locomotive, and, climbing into the cab, he seized the whistle cord and began to jerk it in a manner that made the engineer and fireman think he had gone crazy. There was a series of wild toots such as nobody had ever heard before in the history of railroading, but pretty soon they brought from the other side of the river answering whistles. The operator at headquarters had heard his call and realized that locomotive whistles instead of telegraph keys must be used in the transmission of an important message.

At the close of the war Colonel Clowry entered the service of the Western Union and rose to become its head.

THE LAND OF ROMANCE.

Spain and the Peculiar Temperament of Its People.

If I were asked to sum up the dominant impression that the survival in Spain of the old world mediaevalism makes, I should say that Spain is in the precise and specific sense of the word the home of romance. The special character of the Spanish temperament and of Spanish developments in literature and in art is marked by a quality, rising and sinking with the rise and fall of Gothic, which we call the romantic spirit—a mixture, that is, of the mysterious and grandiose with the grotesquely bizarre of the soaringly ideal with the crudely real, a mixture which to us today has the cunning fascination of art, but was really on both sides the natural outcome of the experiences and feelings of the men who created it. This romantic spirit was once the common possession of all Christendom, but the Spanish temperament peculiarly lent itself to the romantic attitude, and it is in Spain today that we may catch its final vanishing echoes. It is the church, always the most powerful stronghold of tradition among any people, which enables the stranger most vividly to realize how well the romantic spirit has been preserved in Spain. Notwithstanding invasions from without and revolutions from within, especially during the early years of the last century, Spain is still the country where the mediaeval spirit of romantic devotion is most splendidly embodied and preserved.—

Only a Mask.

Many are not being benefited by the summer vacation as they should be. Now, notwithstanding much outdoor life they are little if any stronger than they were. The tan on their faces is darker and makes them look healthier, but it is only a mask. They are still nervous, easily tired, upset by trifles, and they do not eat nor sleep well. What they need is what tones the nerves, perfects digestion, creates appetite, and makes sleep refreshing, and that is Hood's Sarsaparilla. Pupils and teachers generally will find the chief purpose of the vacation best subserved by this great medicine which, as we know, "builds up the whole system."

Cured Hemorrhages of the Lungs.

"Several years since my lungs were so badly affected that I had many hemorrhages," writes A. M. Ake, of Wood, Ind. "I took treatment with several physicians without any benefit. I then started to take Foley's Honey and Tar, and my lungs are now as sound as a bullet. I recommend it in advanced stages of lung trouble." Foley's Honey and Tar stops the cough and heals the lungs, and prevents serious results from a cold. Refuse substitutes. Sold by C. M. Parrish.

I'll stop your pain free. To show you first—before you spend a penny—what my Pink Pain Tablets can do, I will mail you free, a Trial Package of them—Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets. Neuralgia, Headache, Toothache, Period pains, etc., are due always to blood congestion. Dr. Shoop's Headache Tablets simply kill pain by coaxing away the unnatural blood pressure. That is all. Address Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. Sold by Green's Pharmacy.

Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

The kidneys filter and purify the blood—that is their work.

Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases, and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Grangers From the 14 to the 20th.

The arrangements for the Thirty-fourth Annual Encampment and Grange Fair, at Grange Park, Centre Hall, Sept. 14th to 20th, are nearly completed, and this promises to be the largest and best fair ever held at the Park. It only remains for the people to do their part in filling up the exhibition to make it valuable. Let everyone bring something from the farm, garden, orchard, vineyard and poultry yard, or some handiwork of the needle or brush. A premium will be paid for every meritorious article entered.

Do not overlook the antique department, but help fill up this museum with the valuable things owned by your ancesters and the early settlers of this county.

Do not miss the Encampment as this is the most delightful part of the exposition. Come on Saturday, the 14th, and be present for the religious services on Sunday afternoon. Every day of the encampment will be interesting. The veteran soldiers of the Civil War will hold their reunion on Tuesday the 17th.

State College Says Schwab will Build

Charles M. Schwab does intend to erect a new school at State College, an engineering building which will surpass anything in the world. This was confirmed Saturday evening by Dr. Judson P. Welsh, vice president of the College.

It is no secret that several years ago Mr. Schwab told the College authorities he would sometime build them an engineering building, and about a month ago, when General James A. Beaver acting president of the College, and Vice President Judson P. Welsh were in New York, Mr. Schwab again told them that he would erect and equip a building, plans and drawings for which have already been made, and Mr. Schwab intimated that the project might be carried through within the next year or two. The estimated cost of the new school which is to be for mechanical and electrical engineering, is from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000.
